The Express Train From Boston to New-York Thrown From the Track—Passengers Escaped Uninjured.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 3.—The 9 A. M. train from Boston was thrown from the track about an eighth of a mile east of Palmer, by a broken rail, today. The engine, baggage, drawing-room and smoking cars passed safely over, but balance of train turned over, and the cars were badly injured. The train was not going at a high speed. No passenger was badly injured. E. P.

The passengers on this train arrived in this City at a late hour last night, and as far as could be found out, had wholly escaped injury.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Prince at the Thanksgiving Service—English Comments on the Alabama Treaty.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The Court Circular announces that their Royal Highness the Prince and Princess of WALES will be present at the Thanksgiving services in St. Paul's. The Times declares today that England must immediately give notice to the Geneva arbitrators and to the American Government if such action has not already been taken that if the American case is reformed, arbitration may be happily concluded. The Daily Telegraph reports that negotiations to that end have been opened between England and America, and the British representations are not received in a friendly manner.

Election Riot in Ireland.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—At a meeting in Galway, Ireland, today, to nominate a candidate for the House of Commons, a show of hands indicated that the majority of the meeting favored Mr. NOLAN, the Home Rule candidate. The result of the vote created a great reprove, which culminated in a riot between the opposing parties. The Police attempted to suppress the disturbance, when a furious conflict took place between the officers and the rioters, and order was not restored until many persons had been severely wounded.

SPAIN.

Demands of the Spanish West Indian Possessions on the Mother Country—Radical Meeting at Madrid.

MADRID, Feb. 3.—The Deputies in the late Cortes from Porto Rico have issued a manifesto demanding that the reforms promised that colony in 1869, viz., a constitutional government and the abolition of slavery, be carried into effect. A mass-meeting of the Radical party was held here yesterday. Nearly 7,000 people were present. Señor ECHEGARY delivered an address, in the course of which he alluded to the reported atrocities in Cuba, and declared that there was good reason to believe there was some foundation for these accounts. He said he had incontestible evidence that children had been shot, and he demanded that a stop be put to such outrages. The speakers generally called for extensive reforms at home and in the colonies; among them the abolition of capital punishment and slavery, the reduction of taxation, and the privilege of trial by jury. All advocated the continued possession of Cuba and the maintenance of Spanish authority in the Antilles.

The Electoral Committee of the Governmental party today have issued a manifesto to the people of Spain, urging adherence to King AMADEUS, as the course most favorable for the future welfare of the country.

FRANCE.

Opinions of the Orleans Princes on the Late Vote in the Assembly.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—The Duke D'AUMALE and the Prince DE JOINVILLE, in a communication to the Official Journal, state if they had been present in the Assembly on Friday they would have voted in favor of the return of the Assembly and Government to Paris. It is stated that President THIERS has intimated to Count PARIER to wait until Monday before resigning from the Ministry.

RAILROAD ROBBERS.

Attempt to Pillage an Express Car—The Robber is Wounded and Captured.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 3.—An attempt at robbery was made in Adams' Express-car, on the Panhandle train, due here at 6 o'clock, this morning, after leaving Xenia. The armed guard was sitting in darkness, having been deprived of light by the frozen condition of his lamp-oil. His quiet was broken by some unknown person in the remote end of the car, who finally struck a light to better enable him to prosecute his search among the valuables in that part of the car; the light clearly revealed a man at work at a trunk, whereupon the guard fired, striking the robber in the breast, the ball passing toward the right shoulder. The wounded man was taken in custody, brought to this city, and finally removed to the hospital. The wound is not considered as dangerous. The man gives his name as JAMES TRIMBLE, and it is said that he was once a brakeman on this road.

THE PACIFIC COAST.

Movement in Mining Stocks—Robbery of a County Treasury.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 3.—The advices from Acapulco by the Panama steamer contain nothing confirmatory of the reported defeat of Gen. ALATORRE by DIAZ in Oaxaca, as stated in the account received by the way of Rio Grande. Mining stocks are greatly excited here upon the announcements of continued development of rich ores on the Comstock vein. Chollar is quoted at $65; Crown Point, $765; Hale & Norcross, $210; Savage, $160; Kentuck, $235. Last evening the Treasurer of Santa Cruz County, upon turning off the gas in his office, was seized by armed and masked men, who had been concealed in that office. They bound and gagged him, and threatened him with instant death unless he unlocked the vault. He complied, and the robbers took out $20,000 in gold coin, locked the Treasurer in his office and departed. No clue to the identity of the robbers has yet been discovered.

Visit of the President to the Orphans' Fair at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 3.—President GRANT and Vice-President COLFAX visited this city this afternoon, as the guests of SAMUEL M. SHOEMAKER, Esq. During the evening they visited the Union Orphan Asylum Fair, at Masonic Temple, for the benefit of the orphans of Union soldiers, which closed to-night, after a most successful week. During the evening, Gen. GRANT was presented by the ladies with a splendid chair, and also with a gift for Mrs. GRANT. Vice-President COLFAX was presented with an elegant Afghan for Master SCHUYLER COLFAX. The President and Vice-President briefly but appropriately acknowledged the compliments thus bestowed upon them by the ladies. They left on the 8:30 train for Washington.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Debate in the House—Wishes of the Tobacco Trade—The President at Baltimore.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3.—The House met for general debate, Mr. HAY, of Illinois, in the chair, and about a dozen members present. Several speeches were made on a variety of subjects.

UNIFICATION OF THE TOBACCO TAX.

A delegation of the plug-tobacco manufacturers of Richmond, Va., was at the Internal Revenue Office to-day to interview the Commissioner in relation to the tax on tobacco, and to urge him to use his influence with Congress to secure the passage of a law making the rate of taxation uniform on all kinds of manufactured tobacco at whatever rate Congress may decide upon. The Commissioner informed the delegation that the office sympathized with them in their request, and favored such a modification of the present law, not inimical to the public interest, as will meet their desires.

MOVEMENTS OF THE PRESIDENT.

President GRANT and Vice-President COLFAX left Washington this morning for Baltimore, where they will spend the day. The object of the visit is to attend a fair for the benefit of soldiers, and sailors' orphans.

CENTRAL RAILROAD AND THE INTERNAL REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

The attorneys of the New-York Central Railroad commenced their argument before the Commissioner of Internal Revenue today. The point in issue was whether the eighty per cent. interest certificates issued by the corporation to its stockholders were taxable as a dividend. It was contended by the Company that the certificates did not represent income gains or profits of the road; that they were simply as a basis upon which to declare dividends and to enable the Company to pay to stockholders larger dividends than they otherwise could under the laws of New-York, which allows the Legislature to regulate their rates of fare, &c., whenever their dividends exceed ten per cent., and that the certificates themselves were payable, if at all, out of future earnings, and then only at the option of the Company. The argument on behalf of the Company will probably be concluded on Monday, and Commissioner DOUGLASS will, as early thereafter as possible, render a definite decision.

OUR ASIATIC FLEET.

Reception of the Japanese Ministry on Board the Flag-Ship—Location of the Various Vessels.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3.—Official dispatches from Rear-Admiral RODGERS, commanding the Asiatic fleet, and dated Yokohama, Dec. 5, received at the Navy Department, reports affairs in Japan as perfectly quiet. On the 28th of November the Admiral received on board the Colorado his Excellency IWAKURA, Prime Minister of the Empire, accompanied by the Minister of War and suite. They were received with appropriate honors, and passed some hours on board, during which they were escorted through the ship and witnessed the drill of the men. The Palos has been ordered to Winter at Tien-tsin. The Admiral intended to sail on the 7th of December for Nagasaki, thence to Shanghai, and thence to Hong Kong, where he expected to be on the 15th of January. The Alaska is at Yokohama. The Benicia recently visited Ningpo, and thence sailed for Amoy and Swatow, at each of which places she remained two weeks, and was to go to Hong Kong. The Monocacy was at Shanghai; she accompanied the Benicia to Ningpo. The Ashuelot was still at Foochow, at which port affairs were quiet.

SALT LAKE.

The Mormons Tampering With the Press Dispatches—Indignation of the Citizens.

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 3.—Much indignation was expressed here today upon discovering that the dispatches to the Associated Press sent from the West had been tampered with, evidently by parties in the Mormon interest.

The report that most of the leading Gentiles in this city condemn Judge MCKEAN's decision in refusing to bail the capital prisoners is utterly false.

The resolutions of the citizens at their meeting, yesterday, indorsing Judge MCKEAN's decision, were signed today by over 1,500 persons, and to-night the office where the paper is offered for signatures is crowded with people anxious to sign.

The enthusiasm existing here in favor of Judge MCKEAN is extraordinary.

A mass-meeting of the Mormons was held in the Tabernacle this afternoon, and city officers and delegates to the Admission Convention were nominated.

Ex-Congressman FITCH was introduced to the meeting as a prophet, and made a speech. He was chosen one of the delegates to the Convention. Mayor WELLS, who is under an indictment, was renominated.

Another Claimant Coming—A Iowa Minister Wants a Big Estate in New-York City.

From the Marshalltown (Iowa) Times, Jan. 24.

Messrs. BOARDMAN and WOODBURY will visit New-York soon in the interest of Rev. JOEL EDWARDS, looking after the $62,000,000 estate, which is located mostly in New-York City and was orignally leased for ninety-nine years, which has just expired, by ROBERT EDWARDS, the great-grand-father of our friend JOEL. The vast estate, equal to a principality, falls to JOEL and thirty-four other heirs. It is the opinion of those acquainted with the facts in the case, that it is only a question of time as to its realization by the heirs. If a compromise is effected, JOEL will soon have his $2,000,000. If a law-suit results, by the issuing of writs of ejectment against those occupying the property, it may be some little time before it becomes available to him. We sincerely hope our friend may soon come into possession of this vast property, and we know of no one except ourself whom we would rather see have it.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

ASSEMBLY....ALBANY, Saturday, Feb. 3.

The New-York and Brooklyn Ferry Company, in answer to a resolution of the House, submitted the following report:

Receipts for 1870	$739,941 45
Receipts for 1871	748,929 41
Expenses for 1870	527,749 19
Expenses for 1871	531,286 66
Payment for dividends in 1870	170,000 00
Payment for dividends in 1871	220,000 00
Cash on hand Jan. 1, 1872	81,462 07
Outstanding indebtedness, (estimated)	150,000 00

For the two years prior to 1870-71, the Company has made no dividends to stockholders. The report details the real estate of the Company, and where it is situated, and says its assessed value for taxation is $291,000; but which does not show the cost of the real estate to the Company, or its value, which is much greater than the assessed value. They also pay $34,400 per annum for ferry leases and ferry buildings. They own fourteen ferry-boats, valued at $632,000, and two new ones, valued at (when completed) $200,000.

On motion of Mr. HUSTED, it was agreed to adjourn today till Monday evening at 7½ o'clock.

BILLS REPORTED.

By Mr. PRINCE—Authorizing the succession of real estate to female citizens of the United States and their descendants, notwithstanding their marriages with aliens; also to relieve juvenile delinquents from certain disqualifications; also making regulations concerning witnesses in criminal cases; also to protect livery-stable keepers and keepers of horses at riding academies; also adversely on the bill to incorporate the Tenor Coterie of Brooklyn. Laid on the table.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

The following bills were introduced: By Mr. ALVORD—Providing that any property from salt-works shall be paid for under agreement. By Mr. J. D. LORD—Authorizing the City of Rochester to subscribe to the stock of the Ontario Lake Shore Railroad.

The following resolutions were introduced; Mr. J. D. BROWN called up his concurrent resolutions to amend the Constitution as to appropriations of moneys from the State Treasury. On the motion of Mr. ALVORD, the resolutions were referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

REFORM IN LEGISLATION.

Mr. PRICE called up his resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire what reforms can be made in the method of legislation. He proceeded at much length to detail the loose methods in vogue, showing how it is much bad legislation is done. Mr. ALVORD said the speech of his colleague from Queens (Mr. PRINCE) was a very interesting and important one, and deserved to be circulated throughout the length and breadth of the land. But, nevertheless, he thought the only way to remedy the matter was to educate the people of the State up to the point of so amending the Constitution that all local matters shall be kept out of the Legislature and disposed of by Boards of Supervisors. Mr. HAWKINS called attention to the great importance of general legislation, and was in favor of abolishing special legislation. After some further debate the resolution was adopted.

The bill making regulations for governance of the County Superintendent of the Poor was ordered to a third reading.

DEBATE ON ONE OF THE RING ABUSES.

The bill to repeal the act passed in 1871, providing for the printing of the City of New-York, was taken up in Committee of the Whole, but on the motion of Mr. R. HITT, the said bill as many members interested in action of this sort were absent, progress was reported. Mr. HAWKINS moved that the bill be ordered to the third reading. He moved this, because the provision was one of the most infamous of ring measures, as it required every lawyer to give his advertising to the newspaper known as the Transcript, which was the organ of the Ring. Mr. ALVORD asked if the gentleman wanted the House adjourned at this time, as the yeas and nays would certainly be called for, and there being no quorum his motion could not be carried, and the House would be adjourned. Mr. HAWKINS said he certainly did not want to do anything which would produce that result. Mr. D. B. HILL said he would call the yeas and nays. Mr. HAWKINS then withdrew his motion, and the House adjourned until Monday evening, at 7½ o'clock.

CUBA.

Arrival of a New Commander in Cuba.

HAVANA, Feb. 3.—Gen. REQUELME, the new Commander of the Eastern Department, arrived here from Spain yesterday. A portion of the excursionists who came here on the Morro Castle, from New-York, will return today, and the remainder of them next week.

The Utica Street-Car Murder—Trial of the Accused Woman.

From the Utica Herald, Feb. 3.

Judge DOOLITTLE has decided to try the McCarty case at this term of the Court. For some reasons, we regret that he did not find sufficient cause to make him feel justified in putting the trial over to the next term. Not that we in the least suspect Judge DOOLITTLE's fairness and uprightness as a Judge. But, because the Observer and certain busy-bodies have shown so much zeal in the interest of THOMSON as to make the impression on the public mind that there is a conspiracy to get Mrs. MCCARTY out of the way on the charge of constructive murder. The feeling is abroad that she is poor and defenseless, and into be hunted down by the libertines because she is dangerous to them; that they fear the revelations of a trial in which she shall be given an equal chance; and that a hasty trial does not give her sufficient opportunity for defense against the great odds pitted against her.

Disgraceful Conduct of Drunken Men.

From the Lafayette (Ind.) Journal, Feb. 1.

A party of six men came in from the country with a two-horse wagon, the other day, to procure a coffin for a deceased friend. While in the city they all got drunk, and two of them were furnished temporary lodgings in the station-house. The other four started home with the coffin. On the way one of them became overpowered from the effects of the liquor he had drank, and his comrades put him into the coffin to get him out of the way. After riding some miles the man in the coffin awoke to consciousness, and finding his quarters somewhat restricted, straightened himself, and broke out both ends of his wooden prison. By this time all had become sober enough to realize what had been done, so they stopped at the first farm-house, procured hammer and nails, and soon had the coffin pretty nearly in as good condition as when they started with it.

Mr. Horace Greeley's Birthday—Celebration by His Friends.

A reception was given, last evening, at the residence of A. J. JOHNSON, Esq., in Fifty seventh-street, to Hon. HORACE GREELEY, on the completion of his sixty-first birthday. The reception was preceded by an elaborate dinner, at which the guests, besides Mr. GREELEY and his hosts, were Rev. Drs. Chapin and Frothingham, George Ripley, Esq., F. B. Carpenter, the artist; J. F. Cleveland, Esq., Prof. E. L. Youmans, Arnold Guyot, Roswell D. Hitchcock, J. Thomas, J. H. Seelye, of Amherst College, and Mr. Oliver Johnson, all of these gentlemen being accompanied by their wives, and Mr. CLEVELAND by his daughter. The party had scarcely left the table before the guests began to arrive. A large number of invitations had been issued, each card containing a fine steel engraving of Mr. GREELEY and a fac-simile of his characteristic autograph. Nearly all who were invited responded in person. There was scarcely a social set, scarcely a political or professional interest in the Metropolis, which was not fully represented. There was no one there who knew everybody else, but they all knew the guest of the evening, and all seemed glad to do him honor. It was long after the time appointed for the close of the reception before the last guests reluctantly retired, with good wishes for the great journalist.

Mr. Gilsey's Resignation.

Alderman PETER GILSEY, who tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Aldermen, has reconsidered the matter, and will remain for the present a member of the Board.

THE STORM.

A Heavy Fall of Snow Yesterday and Hail Last Night.

Travel and Traffic Impeded—Scenes in This City—The Weather Record—Reports from Elsewhere.

A north-eastern storm of snow and wind set in at 4 A. M. yesterday, and continued up to 2 P. M., and was the most severe in every respect which we have had this Winter. The snow was several inches deep in the thoroughfares. The thermometer indicated 26° at 7 A. M., 31° at noon, and 32° in the afternoon. Car travel was impeded throughout the City, and the several railroad companies had to double their teams, and at early morning the snow-plows cleared the tracks. The livery men reaped quite a harvest, for early in the day they replaced their wheels for sleighs. Many pedestrians paid the penalty of a hasty step by a sudden and unpleasant fall. The iron gratings along Broadway brought many a one to the ground, while the smooth pavement in front of STEWART'S stores was the scene of a series of accidents from morning till night. Young sports, and old ones, too, commenced sleighing in their private cutters early in the day, while fair ladies flitted here and there, as if they considered the weather "glorious." The mails were not delayed to any great extent, and the ferry-boats on both rivers made their trips with tolerable regularity, despite the snow, which rendered it impossible, almost, to see the length of the boat ahead, and the floating ice, of which in the Hudson River especially, there is a large quantity.

Owing to the violent storm prevailing, there was only one arrival from sea by way of Sandy Hook yesterday. The ice in the harbor is quite heavy, rendering navigation by ferry-boats and other vessels dangerous. The outward-bound steamers are detained by the storm, but will probably sail at an early hour today.

Continuance of the Snow Blockade—Union Pacific Railroad Short of Cars.

OMAHA, Feb. 3.—The Union Pacific Railroad, at last accounts, was blocked between Laramie and Rawlins, and also west of Rawlins. The snow was still drifting, and the prospects of the road getting clear were as bad as ever. A train left Ogden yesterday for the East, composed of Central Pacific cars, as there were no Union Pacific cars west of the blockade. This last eastward train is probably now with others at drifts, near Creston. The Japanese Embassy is expected at Salt Lake City to-morrow.

ALBANY, Feb. 3.—The snow-storm began here this morning, and has continued all day, making the first sleighing of the season.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 3.—A heavy north-east snow-storm has prevailed along the Hudson River all day. To-night the gale has increased in violence and the storm continues. Despite this fact, the trains on the Hudson River Railroad are not delayed. The snow, however, is drifting badly, and if the storm prevails throughout the night travel will be seriously interrupted to-morrow.

The Weather Record.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—7 P. M.—The area of low barometer which was Friday afternoon in Southern Georgia has moved north-eastward, and is now off Delaware Bay. The central pressure has steadily diminished and the attending winds have increased. Brisk north-east winds now prevail, with snow, from Maine to New-Jersey and Pennsylvania, and rain is reported from between the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays; north-east winds have backed to the north and west, from Maryland southward to Georgia. Partially cloudy and clearing weather has prevailed in the Gulf States, but falling barometer and cloudy weather, with easterly winds, are now reported from Texas. An area of low barometer has apparently developed during the day in Dakota and Wisconsin, where cloudy and threatening weather now prevail. The rivers have fallen at Memphis, Vicksburg and New-Orleans.

PROBABILITIES.

The low barometer off the Middle Atlantic coast will probably move north-eastward to the neighborhood of Cape Cod by Sunday morning, and north-east winds continue with snow on the New-England coast; north-west winds, with partially cloudy and clearing weather, will prevail on Sunday from Pennsylvania southward to Florida; the barometer will fall very generally throughout the Mississippi Valley, with southerly winds and rising temperature; the pressure in Wisconsin will move centrally north-eastward over Lake Superior, but extend its influence rapidly south-east to Lake Huron. Cautionary signals continue this evening at Cape May, New-York, New-London, Boston and Portland, and brisk winds are anticipated for Lakes Superior and Michigan on Sunday.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT.

7 P. M.—Snow fell last night at Baltimore, Cape May, Cincinnati, Fort Benton, Indianapolis, Knoxville, Lynchburg, Memphis, Nashville, Pittsburg, and in this city. Snow was reported, this morning at Cincinnati, Cleveland, New-London, New-York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg, rain at Cape May and Norfolk, and sleeting at Baltimore, Lynchburg, Oswego and in this city. A heavy north-easterly gale accompanied the snow-storm at New-York. This evening it was snowing at Boston, Buffalo, Burlington, Knoxville, and upon the Summit of Mount Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Portland, Rochester and Toronto; sleeting at New-London and New-York, and rain at Norfolk, Charleston and in this city. At Cheyenne a heavy westerly gale was blowing, with a temperature of 49° above zero.

A DARING ENTERPRISE.

Seeking the North Pole on a Rubber Raft.

From the St. Louis Democrat, Jan. 30.

M. OCTAVE PAVY, a wealthy and adventurous young Frenchman, arrived in this city a day or two ago, he having come here for the purpose of consulting Capt. SILAS BENT in relation to a voyage which he proposes to make to the North Pole in an ingeniously-constructed india rubber raft. This raft is composed of four keel-shaped cylinders, fastened together on the decks by wooden slats, to which the necessary masts and rigging are attached. It was designed by the inventor as a life-boat, to be carried on vessels and used in case of fire or shipwreck. It is so small that it occupies very little room—in fact, M. PAVY carries his packed in a barrel. Such a raft cannot be capsized, and will float in the severest storm. It will carry about 10,000 pounds of freight, besides the crew. Capt. MIKES, who accompanies M. PAVY, has crossed the Atlantic in fourteen days on this same raft. He will attend M. PAVY on his trip toward the Pole.

M. PAVY, finding the Union Pacific Road blocked with snow, will return to New-Orleans, and go to San Francisco by some other route. He will leave San Francisco in the Spring, and will steer for Petrozavodak, where he will take on board provisions, furs, dogs and reindeers. Sailing through Behring's Straits, M. PAVY will bear for the land discovered by Capt. LONG, about 800 miles broad, which he will cross in sledges drawn by reindeer and dogs, taking his boat with him. This land lies between 71 and 80 degrees of latitude, and will be reached, it is expected, some time in August. After crossing it, he expects to find the open Polar Sea described by navigators, on which he will embark and sail around to Greenland or Spitsbergen. He will take five men, a hundred reindeer and forty dogs, six Wineseater rifles, six breech-loading rifles and six Smith & Wesson revolvers, and provisions for six months. He has a splendid flag, presented to him by the New-York Geographical Society, of which he is a member. He will sail under the French flag. The undertaking appears to be hazardous, but Mons. PAVY is confident of being able to solve the problem of the route to the North Pole. We wish him success.

The Approaching Connecticut Democratic State Convention.

From the Hartford Courant, Feb. 3.

The determination of the Democratic leaders in this city to control the nominations at the State Convention next week does not, it appears, create the wildest enthusiasm in New-Haven, though the leaders there are not disposed, provided Mr. ENGLISH is out of the way, to press a candidate for the head of the ticket; but they do seriously object to put on the appearance of being absolutely governed by the dictates of the Hartford ring.

As returns from primary meetings come in, it is apparent that the Convention is to be made up of the old-time leaders, and the men they can easily control. Mr. BURR and Mr. EATON, from Hartford, head the list of veteran attendants. The outspoken GOODSELL, of Bridgeport, will be on hand, as usual, with JAS. L. GOULD, of the Farmer, another ancient follower. C. C. HUBBARD, of Middletown, will also be there. FRED. ALLEN and P. M. WALKER of New-London, are elected delegates. CHAUNCEY GOODRICH goes from Plainville. East Haven sends that faithful martyr, JAS. F. BABCOCK, and noble Hampton, desiring to be heard and covered all over with glory, contributes to the Convention Hon. EDWARD SPICER CLEVELAND, who, with his faithful friend WALLER, will stand by the ocean strand and send the music of the sea back in silver tones to the rugged hills of old Windham. It will be a Convention worth going many miles to look upon; there will be richness in it.

DEMOCRATIC REFORM.

Meeting of the General Committee—Important Business Transacted—Tammany Hall Denounced—A Platform Adopted.

The Democratic Reform General Committee for 1872 held their first meeting at Apollo Hall last evening. The attendance was very large. Among those present were Abraham R. Lawrence, Jr., Senator O'Brien, R. L. Clinton, Samuel Courtney, Judge Bixby, W. C. Whitney, Benjamin Wood, Judge Spaulding, Judge Tracy, John Foley, and others prominent in the Democratic Reform Party.

WILLIAM H. WICKHAM called the meeting to order, and nominated for temporary Chairman ABRAHAM R. LAWRENCE, Jr., and ALEXANDER DAVIDSON as temporary Secretary. After a brief congratulatory speech from Mr. LAWRENCE, the credentials of the various districts were called for, when it appeared that there were contesting delegations from the First, Second, Fourth, Seventh, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-first Districts.

Mr. NOONEY moved that a committee of seven be appointed by the Chair to consider the claims of the contestants, which was adopted.

Senator O'BRIEN moved that a committee of thirteen be appointed by the Chair, on permanent organization. Carried.

The Chair appointed the committee, who reported the following names:

Chairman, William H. Wickham; Secretaries, Alexander Davidson, Marcus Otterburg, James M. Martin; Treasurer, Peter Gilsey.

The ticket was unanimously adopted, and the Chairman announced the Committee on Contested Seats as follows:

Robert B. Nooney, Samuel G. Courtney, Frank M. Bixby, William H. Tracy, Marcus Otterburg, Patrick Monahan, Joseph A. Monheimer.

Mr. WICKHAM was conducted to the chair and returned his thanks. He said the present committee was elected by primaries honestly and fairly conducted, and, for the first time for many years, truly represented the Democracy of New-York. He trusted that harmony would prevail in their councils, and that before their next meeting an undivided front would be presented for the contest they would enter on.

Mr. W. C. WHITNEY, from the Eighteenth District, said it was desirable to have a platform, and, as a means to that end, he presented a series of resolutions, which were unanimously adopted. The resolutions are in substance as follows:

1. We congratulate our fellow-citizens that the Democratic Party of the City of New-York has been efficiently reorganized, on the broad basis of the popular will and in strict conformity to the usages of the party, and that it stands pledged to reform all the abuses which have crept into the administration of public affairs.

2. Deriving our authority directly from the Democratic voters of this City, we, of right, assert ourselves to be true exponents of the wishes of the Democratic Party of the City of New-York; and, as such, we demand of the Legislature a charter which shall recognize their right of the people of this City to manage the municipal affairs free from the intervention of Legislative commissions, and all other devices contrived to nullify the popular will.

3. While we earnestly denounce and denounce the extravagance and corruption which have characterized the expenditures of nearly every department of the City Government, and insist that the perpetrators of these outrages shall be brought to deserved punishment, we also denounce the foul slanders which have been thereby brought on the laborers and subordinate officials, who have, thus, through no fault of their own, been reduced to the extremity of want and suffering; and we insist that these claims shall be examined as quickly as can be done with the exercise of proper care to guard against fraud, and that they shall be the first paid out of the funds which the Legislature has recently authorized to be raised by the City.

Mr. CLINTON said he had some resolutions on a different topic. He said it was known that an attempt was being made to reorganize the Tammany Hall Association. This secret and unauthorized association had recently issued a manifesto in which it claims to represent the Democratic Party. For the purpose of branding that organization with their unqualified disapproval, he moved the following resolutions:

Whereas, A secret organization known as the Tammany Society or Columbian Order, have well nigh laid in ruins the Democratic Party in this City and State; and

Whereas, This secret order have, from time to time, and do now, put forth the monstrous pretence that the Democratic General Committee shall be responsible in party discipline, and in party matters generally, not to the Democracy that elected them, but to the sachems, or Board of Directors, of this secret organization.

Resolved, That the Tammany Society or Columbian Order, is undemocratic, dangerous to the liberties of a free people, and inimical to the institutions of a republican government.

Resolved, That the Democracy owe no allegiance of any kind whatsoever to the Tammany Society or Columbian Order, spurns its authority, and regards with indifference its impotent attempts to force or cajole the Democracy into electing as a place of permanent abode the spot which will hereafter be remembered only as the graveyard of the Tammany Ring.

Resolved, That inasmuch as the Tammany Society or Columbian Order has violated its charter, which limits its duties to deeds of benevolence, and inasmuch as it has been in the past, and may be again, used to clothe with power an irresponsible oligarchy, odious to the masses of the Democratic Party and the community generally; the strong arm of the law should be invoked and its charter annulled, so as to prevent alike its frauds upon the Democracy and its depredations upon the City Treasury, whether by means of fraudulent primary elections or otherwise, it should be rendered in the future as powerless for evil as it is now for good.

Resolved, That any pretended Democratic General Committee that shall organize under the auspices of the Tammany Society or Columbian Order, or in any way submit to its dictation, control or supervision, will be regarded by the Democracy as hostile to Democratic principles and the interests of the Democratic Party.

Mr. COURTNEY—I desire to offer an additional resolution. I move that a copy of these resolutions be sent to each member of the Legislature. Carried unanimously.

The Chairman stated that information in regard to the contested seats could be had at the office of the Executive Committee, No. 194 Broadway.

The meeting then adjourned.

Opposition to Street Openings.

On Friday last a remonstrance was presented to the Assembly, signed by CHARLES O'CONOR and others, against opening and extending One Hundred and Twenty-seventh, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth streets. Mr. O'CONOR, and the other gentlemen who signed the protest, condemn the movement as an outrage. An immense rock stands in the way, and former Street Commissioners have heretofore avoided the ground. It also interferes with a large cemetery attached to the Roman Catholic Convent.

A Piece of Marble Made Pliable by Heat.

There is now in Wheeling, West Va., a piece of marble two inches in thickness, which, it is asserted, can be bent either way, as easily as sheet-iron, three inches out of a straight line. The Wheeling Register gives the following account of it:

"Some time in December, 1869, the Female Seminary at Moundsville was destroyed by fire. This piece of marble, which is three feet two inches in length, seventeen inches in width, two inches in thickness, and weighs about one hundred and thirty pounds, was used as a hearth-stone in the second story of the seminary. It is an American marble of the white variety known as the Rutland, and does not differ, as far as the eye can discern, from any of the other marbles used in the building. When the Seminary building was destroyed this stone fell to the cellar, a distance of fifteen to eighteen feet, and was covered up by the bricks of the fallen chimneys and the debris of the burned building. It remained covered until October, 1871, when Mr. HOLLIDAY had the ruins of the Seminary cleared away. As the workmen were digging out the bricks they came across this hearthstone, and, as it was taken out, one of the men said to Mr. HOLLIDAY, 'This piece of stone is limber.' It was placed aside, Mr. HOLLIDAY thinking he would bring it up to Wheeling as a curiosity, but it was forgotten and remained exposed to the weather until about the 15th of January last, when it was brought to Mr. HOLLIDAY's planing-mill in this city. While it was exposed to the weather it froze while its centre was bent about two inches out of square, and remained thus curved until thawed out.

From the time of its being brought to this city until now, it has been examined by thousands of our citizens, all of whom—and some of them men of scientific attainments—have confessed themselves completely at fault to account for the phenomenon. The question, what chemical action or other cause has changed the nature of this stone? is yet unsolved. The genuineness of the marble is undoubted, and Mr. HOLLIDAY's standing in this community is sufficient guarantee that it is just as he says in regard to the finding of the stone."

INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

Remains of a Mastodon Found in Orange County, N. Y.

A few days since as a farmer in the town of Mount Hope, Orange County, N. Y., was digging in a swamp on his premises, he exhumed from the muck, about eight feet below the surface, a number of bones, from the size and formation of which it is judged they are those of a mastodon. There are two ribs, nearly five feet long, and two vertebræ six inches wide. What would give strength to the supposition that the bones are a portion of the skeleton of one of those old-time monsters, in the absence of other proof, is the fact that several discoveries of mastodon remains have been made in this county during the past thirty or forty years. In 1841 an entire skeleton was exhumed in the vicinity of Scotchtown in a mari-pit. Its tusks were over five feet in length, and with the head bones weighed nearly 600 pounds. It was found near the surface, lying at an angle of about forty-five degrees, head uppermost. Previous to this, portions of over twenty skeletons of mastodons had been found in the Wallkill Valley. One of these was the monster that for years was the wonder of visitors at Peale's Museum, in New-York City. There is in a Boston museum the complete skeleton of a mastodon which was exhumed near Newburg only a few years ago. One was found in a swamp in Sussex County, N. J., fifteen years ago; a farmer taking an exposed part of it to be a stump

CURRENT LITERATURE.

TO CAROLINE

ON HER RECOVERY FROM SICKNESS.

An Unpublished Poem by Mrs. Hemans.

I

When sickness laid the sleepless head,
Mother, watched by the sleepless bed,
Then Heaven—redoubling her tenderness—would spare,
Affection breathed the silent prayer,
That prayer devotion bore so high,
Unlocked the portals to the sky,
And, meeting at the throne halfway,
Explored relief for Caroline.

II.

Angel of Mercy! hear the sigh,
That bids the spirit droop and mope,
Look down upon the sphinxed brow
To come with healing on thy wing,
To bar, our joy, our hope, deposed,
That wife, the daughter, and the friend!
Was a good a little house-wife enough
Had been brought to the work and to
Nothing was the attitude, the sickness, and dreary
Was as lamented as she was
Yes, Mercy heard with smiles benign,
And Caroline was fair and fine.

III.

Ye who in anguish day by day,
Have seen the torch of life decay,
Then dare not before the throne of grace (sic)
Like some excelsior star arise and rain,
Lucky accident certainly not ascribable to any self-assertion on this part.

When I was a little boy, Joe used to come on in the pantomime rallies and "cliffy" and the unfortunate vendors who are generally so disgracefully maltreated on the harlequin-ade portion. Joe got to like it in the end, and to play him in the best place, on account of being, they put him in to play the shopman; but, somehow, he never in his life got a good speaking part—that is if the Cassio rumor was a rumor and nothing more. There was no man in the establishment more contented with his position than Joe Blimber. He worked hard, and threw his whole soul into his duties, and this is saying a good deal. For instance, when they played "Macbeth" or "Richard III." (very seldom—at least it is to be presumed that this was the occasion he received at the Queen's Bench), Joe was always to be seen in the pavilion to give "Encore" when Duncan or Richard was murdered, by the way, for the Nonpareil was frequently called upon to perform this office—a kind of obligato accompaniment to the principal actor.

Blimber's heart was in his work, and his daughter's, they put him in to play Cassio, when he got the cue for "Reputation, reputation, reputation!" and he had to come through the harlequinade business in the opening—in which Mr. Blimber, of course, she had a pas seul—had to be gone through without a hitch, or the pantomime would become a failure. Joe was not brilliant in the character, but he was sound, and never missed his cue, or came in too soon or too late. Mr. Blimber was very fond of his daughter, and used to say that Joe was a treasure to him, and that he didn't know what he should do without him. Joe was very fond of Miss Blimber, and used to say that she was a trump, and that he didn't know what he should do without her. Joe had risen in the world, and was the only pantomime actor who had a dressing room to himself. Joe was very proud of this, and used to say that it was a sign that he was getting on. Joe had a very high opinion of himself, and of his own importance, and used to say that he was the only man who could play Cassio properly, and that he was the only man who could play Harlequin properly. Joe was very fond of his profession, and used to say that he would rather play Harlequin than be Lord Chamberlain, and that he would rather be Harlequin than Prime Minister

THE COST OF LIVING.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have been very much interested in your correspondence, estimate of the cost of living. Pray let me speak one word for that class of persons who, while they are expected to pay as much rent as those who have double the income, are debarred from the privilege of keeping a cow, or even a pig, in the city. Can it be that the Commissioners' Map of 1811, &c., &c., has left no room for the humble cow? Or is it that the Board of Health has interdicted the keeping of swine? Or is it that the Corporation has decided that the cow and pig are nuisances? Or is it that the Corporation has decided that the cow and pig are nuisances? Or is it that the Corporation has decided that the cow and pig are nuisances

The New York Times.

NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, FEB. 4, 1872.

The New-York Times.
DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. This department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

Judge BEDFORD'S Grand Jury has brought in indictments against the following persons, more or less connected with the Ring frauds: Wm. M. Tweed, Peter B. Sweeny, Tom Fields, J. H. Ingersoll, A. J. Garvey, G. A. Woodward, J. McBride Davidson, A. G. Miller, H. W. Genet, Henry H. Smith, Hugh Smith and W. H. Cooke. Eight of these are at present outside of the jurisdiction of the Sheriff of New-York. TWEED has already several indictments to answer, and HARRY GENET, TOM FIELDS and A. G. MILLER will, doubtless, be able to get released by the aid of Judge BARNARD, on bail as insignificant as that which was thought sufficient for TWEED. With this, however, the Grand Jury has nothing to do. Its members have, so far, done their work faithfully and well—to far better purpose, at least, than any of their immediate predecessors. The public will miss the name of A. OAKEY HALL in this new batch of indictments. The Jury have asked for and obtained a further extension of two weeks, and during that time we trust that any dissensions among their members as to the precise degree of HALL'S guilt, may be arranged, and that they may complete the debt of gratitude under which they have already laid their fellow-citizens, by bringing in a true bill for fraudulent breach of trust against Mayor HALL.

We trust that the public will watch narrowly the items submitted by the various Departments to the Interim Board of Apportionment as their estimates for the present year. We published yesterday Mr. VAN NORT'S estimate of the sums required by the various Bureaus of the Department of Public Works. In the aggregate ($2,677,107) it closely corresponds with the sum voted to the Department under TWEED'S superintendence. There are, it is true, some valid reasons given for the apparent extravagance of certain items. There are others, however, which are plainly very much in excess of what public necessity demands, and which the public will not quietly submit to pay. Take, for example, $15,000 for "contingencies." This is a ridiculously large sum to be voted for perfectly indefinite purposes. The sum asked for "printing for Departments" ($50,000) is also far too large, and the some remark applies to the $50,000 estimated for "stationery and blank-books," to the $75,000 for "supplies and cleaning public offices," and the $10,000 for "sprinkling roads and avenues." In spite of all we have heard about the reduction of sinecures, Mr. VAN NORT asks $225,000 for salaries against TWEED'S $240,279. After the figures we have given relating to the fraudulent expenditures of the Bureau of Lamps and Gas, it is somewhat startling to find $1,149,107 asked as the proportion for this department of public service. If Mr. VAN NORT, or any other City official, thinks that the people will tamely put up with a repetition of the bloated estimates of the Tammany régime, the sooner he is undeceived the better.

Controller GREEN, acting as President of the new Board of Audit, is right in pressing the immediate consideration of the unpaid and perfectly legal claims of the charitable institutions against the City. Unmerited hardship is being inflicted on thousands of people by the procedure of the late Board of Apportionment in unjustly depriving these institutions of their legal share of public money, and the new Board cannot too soon redress the injury.

Col. STEBBINS is re-establishing with all possible promptitude the economical traditions of the original Board of Commissioners in the Department of Parks. He has already reduced the force of men in the employ of the Department by 1,500, leaving a roll amply sufficient to carry on all necessary works and to maintain the parks, places and boulevards in a way which will be perfectly satisfactory to the public. We shall have no more of HUSTED'S gravel contracts under the administration of Col. STEBBINS; the day of the patent lamps, charged at fancy prices, and of ornamental lamp-posts, liberally distributed before the houses of Ring magnates, is over. Judge HILTON'S marvelous achievements in gardening and decoration were altogether too expensive for our over-taxed community, being not only outrages upon good taste, but upon the public purse.

Custom-House Misrepresentation.

We have been obliged heretofore to show that the purpose of the Tribune for some time past has been, not truth or the public good, but to gain its own ends and those of its faction by slandering its opponents. We are ready to stop doing this kind of work as soon as the Tribune ceases to make it necessary. It is not pleasant. Discussion of principles or of measures, even with a sharp and bitter opponent, is not without its pleasure, and generally affords some instruction to both parties to the controversy, and almost always to their audience. But the Tribune's motto at present is, "Men, not principles;" it is animated by one of the basest and meanest and most hateful of human passions—jealousy; it desires only the destruction of the men that have balked its project of getting absolute control of the Republican Party, and to attain that end it stops at nothing. The chief object of its spite for the present is Mr. CORNELL, Surveyor of the Port, whom it charged in unmistakable although not actionable words, with perjury; the assumed ground of the action being the assertion of a man whose pretended cause against Ex-Collector MURPHY broke down shamefully, and was thrust out of Court, and of whom itself says, in its wrath at the pitiful position in which he has placed it, "he cannot be believed." Under these circumstances, what is its retraction or correction of the slanderous imputation put upon Mr. CORNELL? This: "We suppose it evident that Surveyor CORNELL swore as near to perjury as he dared, in his efforts to clear the Custom-house from any assessment for political purposes;" and again: "Mr. CORNELL has, irrespective of SHEEHAN, sworn as nearly off the truth as he dared." This is the style in which the Tribune treats a gentleman of intelligence, position and character because he has helped to spoil its plans and defeat its candidates; whose iniquities, in fact, are summed up in the fact that he was, as the Tribune is not wise enough to allow the world to forget, "Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee."

Now, in the first place, Mr. CORNELL made no "efforts" to clear the Custom-house from the imputation of such wrong as is implied in an assessment on salaries for political purposes. The sense conveyed, and intended to be conveyed, by that word "efforts" is wrongful, injurious, and, to put the case as mildly as possible, disingenuous. It is, however, in perfect keeping with the Tribune's course on this subject from the beginning, and, therefore, is not worthy of particular notice. Mr. CORNELL was not a voluntary witness before the Investigating Committee. He was there because he was summoned; and when there he volunteered no testimony, at least upon this subject. He merely answered the questions that were put to him, and his answers have been supported in every particular by the best evidence from all quarters. Nor was he a voluntary witness in the suit, if suit it must be called, brought by the man who "cannot be believed," and in which SHEEHAN and the Tribune, the Tribune and SHEEHAN, with their affidavits and their leaders, and their leaders and their affidavits, were swept out of Court in such a promiscuous mass that it was impossible to tell the one from the other, and will be, this many a day. Mr. CORNELL went there compelled by a subpœna, or at least sure that he would be so compelled if he did not go otherwise. (for we have had no communication with him upon this subject,) and his evidence was just what he was asked to give—that and no more. To speak of such action as efforts, is to use language for the purpose of misrepresenting the truth and misleading the reader. The writer, in his own words, wrote "as nearly off the truth as he dared."

And, in the next place, the mention of perjury again in connection with the evidence given by Mr. CORNELL is an example of malice and effrontery carried to a monstrous pitch. The occasion of this renewed imputation is the fact that, although Mr. CORNELL denied that contributions were exacted from Custom-house officers as a condition of retaining office, he admitted that such contributions were voluntarily made by many of his subordinates, some of whom excused themselves from doing so on the score of poverty, and a few of whom even had their contributions returned to them for the same reason. Now, as to the exaction of contributions for political purposes, Mr. CORNELL'S testimony that there was no such exaction was sustained by every witness, including those called in the interest of the Tribune by the man who "cannot be believed." As to the fact that contributions are made by Custom-house officers and clerks on occasion of important elections, has the Tribune really the face to attempt to pass this off upon the public as a new iniquity, or a new discovery of an old iniquity, or, so long as it is voluntary, as an insanity at all? If the Tribune had needed information upon this point, (which is hardly credible,) and had inquired into the matter, as we have, it would have found, as we have, plenty of evidence as good as that upon which it has been obliged to set down its man SHEEHAN as one who "cannot be believed;" that political contributions from Custom-house officers and clerks have been common for at least twenty or thirty years; that they are not exacted under threat, even implied threat, of removal in case of refusal, although under Dem-Democratic discipline there was very strong expectation that they would be made; that it came to be thought "shabby if a fellow wouldn't give something to support the party and the Collector that gave him his place;" that the contributions were made on or about one day, to wit, pay-day, for the very simple and obvious reason that that is the time when salaried men are best able to make any contributions. Moreover, it would have discovered, upon equally good testimony, that there has been less pressure from any quarter upon officers and clerks in this regard during the last three years than for many years previous; that is, that the Collector, heads of Departments and divisions, and superior officers have protected their subordinates against the moral force sometimes used by outside politicians to bring out a large contribution from the Custom-house, just as a like force is sometimes applied to a wealthy congregation to bring out a large contribution to this mission or that cause. The essential point in this question is the exaction under threat, actual or implied, of removal if the contribution is not made; and here the Tribune's case has broken down utterly. Not before the Committee, nor before the Court, nor before the public has a single competent and credible witness appeared who testified to his knowledge of any such exaction since the election of Gen. GRANT.

This matter is, in itself, one of very small importance; but it has acquired importance as a perfect example of the spirit in which the Tribune and those whom it represents are attacking Gen. GRANT'S administration. It will prove an example also of the degree of success that will be attained by these disinterested patriots.

Woman in Modern Society.

Where there is so much smoke, there certainly must be some fire, and under all this agitation of the rights and wrongs of woman there must be some serious cause. Without undertaking now to go over the whole ground of the subject, we will only look at the main points in woman's present position in society.

Whether we like it or not, we must be content to call our age distinctively democratic, and its ruling ideas are liberty and equality. Whether these ideas are carried out or not, they are in the minds of our people, and of women as well as of men. But what different effects they produce in the two sexes! Man is, on the whole, invigorated and elevated by the democratic age. We are generally educated not only in the rudiments of learning, but in some practical business, and our boys for the most part start in life with a fair prospect of taking care of themselves, as well as with a strong ambition to do this. The average American boy prefers any kind of honest work to dishonorable indolence, and our schools and colleges are training our youth more and more to carry their book learning into practical use and manly enterprise. Our best young men have been willing to bear the trials of the camp, and to rough it in every way on the engineer's survey or the naturalist's exploration. Our modern life exacts this of men, that they should be actually good for something and do something.

Is it so with women? Does modern society call her down from her aristocratic position or fancy, and train her to be useful? Is any sort of business set before her as the true aim, and are young girls of little or no fortune taught to look to useful industry instead of dainty gentility as the end of their aspiration and effort? Quite the contrary, on the whole, the fact appears to be. More girls are taught certain useful arts, indeed, than of old, and many are studying elegant accomplishments that help them to a livelihood. But on the whole the taste of women is less for utility than in the days of our mothers and grandmothers. The difference between them and men, in that respect, is this. Their tastes and wishes and habits are leveled upward to the standard of the luxurious lady, while the tastes and wishes and habits of men are leveled downward to the standard of the business man. Modern society educates in our girls dainty softness and indolent exaction, while it encourages in our men practical aims and business thrift. The mechanic's daughter scorns house-work and insists upon dressing as nearly as possible after the style of the merchant's wife, and she must have her piano, while the merchant's son may like to try his hand at the mechanic's bench and begin there his training in architecture. In other words, with girls the democratic passion is to be the fine lady of leisure, while with boys the passion is to be the man of business. Thus the same spirit of equality that gives softness and inefficiency to girls, gives hardihood and efficiency to boys.

Test this distinction by "the most characteristic" mark of social position—we refer to dress. Is it not clear that our democratic habit is leveling woman's dress upward to the mode of high fashion, while it is leveling man's dress downward to the simplicity of business? There is no part of our country where the fashion-plates do not regulate the bonnets and dresses of women; and even among the peasants of Europe, where, as in the Tyrol and Switzerland, certain costumes have been established for ages, and the grandmother's portrait represents the grand-daughter's gala attire, the new modes are showing themselves, and French fashions keep up the prestige no longer held by French bayonets. Every farmer's daughter has her clothes made according to the prevailing mode with as expensive material and as frequent chance as possible, while the boys of the family make little account of the mode, and the coat and hat are made to pass muster for years, until they are worn out. Now this distinctive fact is of great importance both morally and materially. Dress is one of the great powers of our age, and it is remarkable that at present it is as characteristic of woman's subjection as of man's emancipation. In old times the great thing about a man was his clothes, and to be a gentleman implied an enormous outlay in silks, velvet, embroidery, gold and jewels. Now, a true gentleman is sure to be simply clad, and showy costumes are left to brainless fops. But with women, the case is different; and the most intelligent and worthy of the sex readily covet the most costly bonnets and dresses, and wear diamonds and laces that are in themselves a fortune. Their poorer associates envy the elegance that they cannot rival, and sometimes character as well as contentment is the price paid for the aspiration. A single party dress, that is worn but a few times, costs a fashionable woman some $250, while her husband, for less than half the sum, can buy a full-dress suit that he can wear for years.

How all this is to end, who knows? When is the best spirit of modern times to reach woman and give her a fair share in the emancipation in which man so rejoices? It is a great question, and without going far into the matter now, we must be content with saying that, when the true and essential womanhood is brought out and appreciated as true manhood is now appreciated, some relief will appear, and, in the true Republic, the clothes will be secondary and the woman will be primary, and not vice versa, as now.

The Library We Want.

In discussing the subject of a Free Public Library, a few days ago, we showed that, in its large and valuable collection of books, its substantial building, its situation, and, finally, in the fortunate non-occupancy of the adjoining lots, owned by the ASTOR family, the Astor Library presented all the elements of a foundation for an institution of the kind New-York so greatly needs. For a hundred years to come, a representative of almost every family living above the line of Eighth-street must pass this point at least once a day; while, for those who live below that line, the site of the Astor Library is more convenient of access than any other which could be selected.

It remains now to consider the possibility of so building upon this foundation that the superstructure shall become a permanent and fully-furnished source of profit to our citizens. We believe that the material with which to do this lies close at hand. The union of the Mercantile and Astor Libraries would promptly solve the most difficult parts of the problem. We do not conceive that the money feature is likely to defeat the scheme when once its feasibility is demonstrated, and the details of organization and management are developed. Deferring for the present a consideration of any plan of union, let us look at the peculiar adaptation of such a project to the necessities of the case.

We have spoken emphatically of the value of the Astor collection of books as a foundation. But for several years no books of importance have been added, and whoever wishes to consult authorities less than seventy or eighty years old must pursue his investigations elsewhere. This deficiency of the Astor is largely supplied by the Mercantile collection, to which the active and liberal management of the past ten years has lavishly contributed this class of works. There are several departments in the Astor which are especially poor and meagre, which the stores of the Mercantile would at once render respectable, if not rich. These are the departments of American Genealogy, Town Histories, American Biography, Directories, American Newspapers, and United States Public Documents. There is scarcely a department of the Astor, moreover, to which the Mercantile could not contribute very many comparatively new books; thus making them reasonably complete. Probably fifty thousand volumes could thus be added, by the one to the other, of such works as the Astor really needs to make it satisfactory as a reference library. Such an accession of itself would make the Astor a larger library than the Boston Public Library now is in all its departments. After thus contributing fifty thousand volumes to the reference branch of the Astor, the Mercantile could begin the erection, upon such a foundation, of a circulating department, by turning over at least seventy-five thousand volumes more for lending purposes. Probably no better selection for such a department was ever made or ever could be made; for it is largely the selection of a great reading public itself. These books have been bought, as most of us know, either at the suggestion of readers themselves, or to meet their known wants. There are few "dead" books among them, (and a margin of fifteen thousand volumes has been allowed for such as might not be worth the transfer,) and, having been bought to gratify so many different tastes, they cover a much wider range, perhaps, than the books of any other existing institution whose stores are accessible to the public.

The new Circulating Department would have this other important advantage. Having grown up under the auspices of men who have favored the utmost liberality in the duplicating of books, it could not fail to carry with it the necessity of continuing that system. Thus, the New-York public would have access to a library wholly unlike and in advance of any other free public library in the world. Not a library having one set only of DICKENS and COOPER, but fifty; not one or two sets only of SCOTT and THACKERAY, and JAMES, and DUMAS, but forty; a library to which the borrower may come with the certainty of getting at any time any volume he may ask for of the works of Hume, Gibbon, Macaulay, Froude, Bancroft, Hildreth, Prescott or Motley. What a boon to the public would a free library of this kind be! The Astor library thus reinforced would, in the munificence of its endowment, no less than in the number of volumes it owned, far surpass any existing institution. And when, either by the gifts of our merchant princes, or by the annual assistance of some such law as that proposed by Mr. JUDD, a handsome yearly sum is guaranteed for its permanent maintenance, such an Astor Free Public Library as we have sketched would possess an aggregate of means which would soon make it one of the largest libraries in the world.

Now, if such possibilities are involved in the union of these two libraries, why not realize them at once? Why is it necessary to go through slow and expensive processes in order to get a public library, and build one up de novo, when books by the hundred thousand, already bought and paid for, are here awaiting an opportunity to fulfill their useful mission? These are questions deserving of serious consideration and a candid reply. We have too much faith in the generosity and public spirit of our wealthy citizens to doubt what that reply will be.

The Small-Pox Hospital.

From a report which appeared in the TIMES a few days back, we are compelled to believe that the continuance of small-pox in this City up to the present day is due, for the most part, to the culpable negligence of those who have charge of the Small-pox Hospital on Blackwell's Island. After a cure has been effected, the patients, we are told, are permitted to resume their infected clothing, and to return to their homes. In this way the street-cars are polluted, and the terrible disease scattered through the several Wards. At the Hospital, the patients are treated in a most inhuman manner if they are not able to pay for "luxuries;" the straw that has served one is transferred to the bed of another; in short, all sorts of follies are committed by the officials and their deputies, with perfect impunity. The Commissioners of Charities and Correction, who are required by law to supervise the management of the hospitals sustained by public taxation, never jeopardize their heads by putting them inside the door of the Small-pox Hospital, and to this fact is due the lax discipline referred to, and the sad results which have followed.

In another column we publish today a special plea from Dr. HALLOCK, Jr., in favor of the small-pox hospital. He represents himself as the resident physician at Castle Garden, and we must certainly say that his "plea" loses very much of the effect it might have had but for this circumstance. Some of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction happen to be also Commissioners of Emigration, and it is, therefore, quite reasonable to suppose that the object of the resident physician at Castle Garden is simply to give his masters a little cheap whitewash. He does not attempt, however, to deny the truth of the statements made in our news columns in reference to the general treatment of the patients who cannot afford to pay $5 per week for board, but he admits that the accommodation has not been adequate, and promises that this will soon be remedied.

The off-hand manner in which he excuses the Health Board for not giving more attention to small-pox is very amusing. According to his notion, "it is not fair or judicious to expect too much from any one department," and as the Health Board has to attend to the lower part of Mulberry-street and to guard against the arrival of a grim visitor from Asia, "it should be excused from doing more." Now, it is very evident that a great deal of injury is being done through this shifting, from one board to another, of a very important public duty. Week after week we are entertained in the report of Dr. MORRIS by interesting allusions to the valuable services that are performed by a corps of vaccinating physicians. We have no doubt Dr. MORRIS believes that we are indebted to these indefatigable gentlemen for not having small-pox raging throughout the City in its worst form. Possibly this may be the case, but, in the face of such an opinion, it does seem strange that no attempt should have been made to prevent the convalescent patients from returning to their homes in infected clothing. That there has been a criminal neglect of duty somewhere no one can deny, and the sooner the responsibility is placed upon the proper shoulders, the better it will be for the public.

Russia and India.

A Russian paper, the Exchange Gazette, has published an article of a nature hostile to England, and which has attracted even more attention than the recent utterances of the Goloss so adverse to Germany. The article proposes the establishment of railway communication between Russia and India. It points out that the Americans have succeeded in uniting the Atlantic and Pacific by a railway, and asserts that there is no reason why the Russians should not succeed in a like undertaking. England, we are told, is contemplating the establishment of railway communication with India through Turkey and Persia; but the Russian project would have great advantages over the English one. The existing system of Russian railroads terminates on the banks of the Volga; and from this point to India is much nearer than from Constantinople to India. It further might happen, observes the Gazette, that "Russia, by pushing forward through Samarcand, would conquer Persia and Asiatic Turkey, in which case the English railway would fall into the power of Russia."

The indirect advantages of the scheme are described with equal candor. It is admitted that the naval power of England will, for some time, make her impregnable at home, and capable of inflicting great damage on any other naval State in the event of a conflict. England can only be attacked by land, and so far as Russia is concerned only in India. "She is also vulnerable in Canada, and we see how she strives to be friendly with the United States, while she does all she can to injure Russia, knowing that the Russians are too far off to do her any immediate harm." The animus crops out here that inspired Mr. CATACAZY, and finds definite expression in the succeeding announcement that the surest way to force England to adopt a different policy toward Russia is for Russia to get as near England in India as the United States are near to her in Canada. At present "when Germany, Austria or Turkey wants to do anything against Russia, we may be sure that England is on their side;" but if that power knew that Russia could strike to hurt in reply English behavior would be very different.

The general indictment drawn here is, of course, no new thing, but the remedy proposed is novel and looks plausible. There would probably be immense topographical difficulties to overcome, and the cost of the road suggested would be enormous. Still, the example of the trans-continental roads of America, answers both these objections, and the incalculable material gain, to say nothing of the political influence attainable by Russia through the consummation of the scheme, would make it well worth her while to try to carry it out, even in the absence of successful precedents. Whether the other great Powers would be disposed to assent to its peaceable consummation is a matter of conjecture. Once connect the Bay of Bengal with the Baltic by a Russian railway, and the fate of Constantinople would be sealed; and it is only when the considerations that have been so strongly operative on this point for generations past have ceased to govern the policy of the Western Powers that such a contingency is likely to be tamely accepted.

MINOR TOPICS.

We hear grave complaints of the offensive smells, which, emanating from the basement of the building, penetrate the reading-rooms of the Astor Library. Gentlemen in the habit of frequenting the institution state that these odors are of that kind which naturally produces typhoid fever. Inasmuch as Mr. ASTOR'S residence is next door to the Library, it might be well worth that gentleman's while, for his own sake, to take immediate steps for the abatement of this dangerous nuisance.

Gov. PALMER has vetoed the bill lately passed by the Legislature of Illinois, to "Regulate the Manner of Applying for Reprieves, Commutations and Pardons." According to its provisions a prisoner seeking pardon would be obliged to send a written petition to the Executive three weeks after having given notice of his intention to the State's-Attorney of the city or county where the offense was transmitted. The Attorney is then supposed to give notice of the purpose of the criminal to the person or the persons interested in the prosecution. In the message which accompanies the veto, the Governor takes particular pains to point out that the act as passed, if it became law, would be in direct violation of the State Constitution, which declares him to be the exclusive judge of the propriety of granting reprieves and pardons. Moreover, he thinks it would often prove a great hardship to prisoners who can neither read or write to be compelled to comply with such a law; that there would be much trouble in deciding who should receive the preliminary notice in cases wherein railroads and other corporations may be concerned; and finally, in regard to the responsibility attaching to the office of State Attorney. It appears there is no clause to compel attornies to give the notice contemplated by the act, or to allow the Governor to revise their conclusions. Gov. PALMER believes that assistance might very properly be given to the Executive in collecting the testimony favoring the pardon of prisoners, but he is opposed altogether to the idea of having more restraints put upon him in the exercise of his power than is already provided for through "publicity and the watchful criticisms of the Press and people." The New-Jersey Board of Pardons, since its organization, has done good service, but "Jersey justice" is so peculiarly stringent that it becomes, at least, a debatable question whether the same system would be found to work with equal success in other States.

Those who are alarmed about additions to our not inconsiderable criminal resources, will no doubt be much interested to learn that fresh foreign supplies are on hand. A few nights ago a hundred and fifty thieves sat down to supper in the neighborhood of London on the invitation of "NED WRIGHT," who is known as "the Converted Burglar." In the course of the evening Mr. WRIGHT intimated that a wealthy London banker had announced his intention of taking under his patronage a number of the boys then present, who might be desirous of earning an honest livelihood, and "furnishing them with money and clothes to make a fair start in life." Numerous candidates immediately offered themselves for participation in these advantages, and inasmuch as Australia is twelve weeks' journey, and America twelve days, there is little doubt but that we shall get some of the benevolent banker's money and clothes over here. New-York is already so amply supplied with home criminal produce that constant accessions of the foreign article are becoming a trifle de trop, and perhaps all the more so, seeing that the fire has, in a great degree, deprived us of our safety-valve, Chicago, to which city we owed deep obligations in this respect, and for whose revival, if merely as our cave of Adullam, we must ever pray.

A remarkable instance of the prodigious folly into which meanness may lead a man has been lately afforded in the case of one Mr. CONNOLLY, Member of Parliament for Drogheda, Ireland. This person, having taken a lodging in London, to give the Legislature the benefit of his talents, was scandalized at discovering that "a half-used square of Windsor soap, value one penny," had been removed from his room. Senatorial heads are, we know, not always clean, and the loss of saponaceous material was in this instance most severely felt. A detective was summoned, and a careful search on the part of this acute officer discovered the missing morsel in the house-maid's room. The horrid criminal was hurried to the cell of the Police Court, but, outrageous to relate, the Magistrate, pandering, no doubt, to low popularity, positively refused to entertain the charge. Before long the tables were turned, and an action of "SCANLAN against CONNOLLY" came before the County Court, when the jury returned a verdict of $50 for the plaintiff, with liberal costs, and the Judge ordered immediate payment. We should not wonder if "How are you off for soap?" was a popular cry at the next Drogheda election, accompanied by liberal gifts of eggs a little past their première jeunesse, and cats which have exhausted even nine lives.

CONSTANTINE OSCAR EUGENE METKIEWICZ, a gentleman who has satisfied the reporter of the San Francisco Chronicle that he is the third son of Count JOSEF METKIEWICZ, Export Master, General and Counselor of State of the Russian Empire, has now turned up in the character of a victim. He claims to be the affianced husband of a young Massachusetts lady, who is reputed to be heiress in her own right to property valued at some two millions of dollars, and declares that he is surrounded by a band of blackmailers, who are continually endeavoring to find some additional means of ruining his reputation. About a year ago quite a stir was created in New-York fashionable society by the "eccentricities" of this same nobleman. He was charged with having stolen a diamond ring from a young lady, but for reasons best known to the parties concerned, the case never came to trial. The Count declares the ring was given him as a pledge of affection, and that the charge was trumped up by persons who desired to inflict upon him an irreparable injury. After this experience it appears that he went to Europe, but the love which he bore his American fiancée was so strong that he was compelled to make nineteen trips across the Atlantic to visit her. The father of the heiress, according to his statement, has finally consented to allow the marriage to take place in nine months, and pending the happy event he is trying to kill time by breaking the hearts of the reigning belles of San Francisco.

MAZZINI is now sixty-four, but agitation seems to agree with him, for he pursues the business with unabated ardor. He is now acting in concert with the Internationalists. Although he does not coincide with their socialist views, he and they agree in the design of totally overthrowing the work of CAVOUR'S life, Italian unity, and establishing a democratic republic. It is asserted that the Italian Internationalists are ready to sink their various differences in a united effort for this end.

John McB. Davidson's Safes.

We have received the following letters, and lose no time in placing them before the public:

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In the columns of your valuable paper this morning, I noticed in the safe-list my name charged with a safe costing $1,850. I ask that you publish the following affidavit:

City and County of New-York, ss.: JOHN FOX, being duly sworn, doth depose and say, that he did not at any time order or purchase a safe, valued at $1,850, from JOHN MCB. DAVIDSON & Co.; that he never received any such safe, nor was the same delivered on deponent's order to any person: that the only transaction had with the firm of JOHN MCB. DAVIDSON was that of the purchase of a safe for the Foundling Asylum, which was delivered to Sister IRENE as a personal contribution to the Asylum, for which safe deponent gave said firm his check for the sum of $450, taking a receipt in full for all demands up to May 30, 1870. According to DAVIDSON'S own books the safe charged to deponent is alleged to have been purchased May, 1869. That deponent did not have any transaction with said firm before said May 30, 1870, nor has he had any dealings with said firm since said date.

The following is a copy of voucher for the payment of the safe purchased by deponent:

NEW-YORK, May 30, 1870.

The Importers' and Traders' National Bank of New-York:

Pay to JOHN MCB. DAVIDSON four hundred and fifty dollars ($450.) JOHN FOX.

Endorsed.

Safe Foundling Asylum,
J. MCB. DAVIDSON,
CHAS. A. HOFF.

Sworn before me, Feb. 3, 1872, ROBERT H. JOHNSTON, Notary Public, County of New-York.

JOHN FOX, No. 3 Morris-street.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Feb. 3, 1872.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

In your issue of the 1st inst., Judge LOEW is charged with having received one of Mr. J. MC. B. DAVIDSON'S safes, from the City.

The safe in question was sent to Judge LOEW at my request, and paid for by me, as can be shown by a receipt therefor from Mr. DAVIDSON.

In justice to Judge LOEW, I trust you will make the necessary correction, remaining

Respectfully, JOS. KOCH.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Feb. 3, 1872.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

My attention has been called to an article in today's TIMES in MCB. DAVIDSON'S safe account. Several charges appear against "GEO. B. MCLEAN." I assume they are intended for me. The charges as stated are incorrect. I have received but one safe from Mr. DAVIDSON, value $135, and if that has not been paid for it is his fault and not mine. By making this correction you will oblige, GEO. B. MCLEAN.

SATURDAY, Feb. 3, 1872.

What Our Reporters Ascertained.

Several reporters of the TIMES were charged with a mission, yesterday, to clean some facts relative to the safes furnished by J. MCBRIDE DAVIDSON to private individuals at the expense of the City. An effort to obtain some kind of a statement from the members of the Ring and the Tammany politicians who were credited with safes in the TIMES list, was unsuccessful on account of the impossibility of obtaining an interview with them.

The dread of indictments by these gentry made it extremely difficult to find them, and many of them have, in fact, fled from the City. Repeated visits were made to the houses and places of business of GENET, SHANDLEY and others of that ilk. All of them were denied by the servants, and inquiries at the clubs they usually frequent only elicited evasive answers.

RICHARD TWEED was the only man who could throw any light upon the Metropolitan safe souvenirs presented by the City, but he was invisible, and RUFUS ANDREWS, who also got a safe, was not to be found. Mr. G. F. FOWLER, Jr., of No. 30 Nassau-street, to whom one of the costly presents was delivered by MCBRIDE DAVIDSON, is in the Engineer Department of the Adirondack Company, as his sign indicates. His office was found closed on two visits, and it could not be ascertained whether or no he had, like Surrogate HUTCHINGS, Judson JARVIS and Sheriff BRENNAN, made a bona fide purchase, or like Mr. NATHANIEL JARVIS, never owned a safe. Judge FREDERICK E. LOEW received his safe from Judge KOCH, who is ready to show a receipt for the safe furnished to him. Judge LOEW is indignant at the discovery that his safe is charged in the City accounts. F. PORTER, No. 102 West Twenty-second-street, turns out to be a Mrs. PORTER, the keeper of a house classified by the Police as disorderly. The TIMES reporter being afraid of what Mrs. Grundy might say, did not enter the house, but assured himself positively as to its character. Whether the recipient of the safe has paid for it or received it as a gift from the corporation is still a matter of doubt. No. 24 Cedar-street was visited, when the reporter ascertained that T. W. STERRY & Co. no longer do business there. One of the members of the firm who do occupy the premises stated that Mr. STERRY was the Colonel of the Sixth Regiment National Guard, and that he had been heard to speak of the publication of his name in connection with the safes the day before, when he said that the safe was now in the armory of the Sixth Regiment, and that he had paid for it himself. It was originally delivered at the store, and when the firm was changed, about a year ago, it was removed to where it is at present. EDWARD MARRENNER, whose large bills are conspicuous in the accounts of the Bureau of Repairs and Supplies, and in other City and County accounts, decided to another reporter that he had ever received a safe as a gift from the City. His clerk exhibited a receipt for $345, the price of the safe that had been furnished to him.

Mrs. Jarley's Wax-Works.

An exhibition of Mrs. Jarley's Wax-works will be given at Harlem Music Hall, corner of Third-avenue and One Hundred and Thirtieth-street, Harlem, on Monday and Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the ladies of St. Andrew's Church, for the benefit of the organ fund.

SUMMARY OF AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

LAST NIGHT'S PHILHARMONIC.

The third concert of the present series of entertainments by the Philharmonic Society was given at the Academy of Music last evening. The audience was by no means numerous, but its reduced size can fairly be ascribed to the weather, rather than to any lessening of the public's interest. The programme interpreted was framed as follows:

Symphony—No. 4, in D minor.....Schumann
1. Andante, allegro. 2. Romanza. 3. Scherzo. 4. Allegro con spirito.
Aria—From the Oratorio "The Creation," "With Verdure Clad".....Haydn
Mlle. HENRIETTE CORRADI.
Concerto—For violin.....Max Bruch
With orchestral accompaniment,
Señor P. SARASATE.
Overture—"Macbeth," in C major, Op. 13.....Heinefetter
Aria—"Il Polinto".....Donizetti
Mlle. HENRIETTE CORRADI.
Overture—"Leonore," No. 3, in C major....Beethoven

The feature of the entertainment was without doubt the violin-concerto, made interesting by its own merit and impressive beyond description by the magnificent playing of Señor SARASATE. The concerto is written with a sufficient appreciation of the legitimate uses of the instrument to rank with the best classical compositions become familiar by repeated performances, and passages of the andante are of a melodious beauty, easily discovered and admired. The three movements of the piece, the introduction, the andante and the allegro, were superbly delivered. Señor SARASATE was favored with a most cordial reception, but the effect of his work was shown by a demonstration of delight which the audiences of the Philharmonic do not often unite in. Nothing, indeed, could have been better than the violinist's recital. Señor SARASATE'S right and left hands have equal skill. His command of the keyboard is thorough, and his management of the bow is subject to a sensibility and an eloquence that are not part of merely technical acquirements. Señor SARASATE was recalled after his share of the night's labors was ended. If the other soloist did not afford the full satisfaction resulting from the violinist's efforts, her debut was nevertheless successful. Mlle. CORRADI'S voice is deficient in richness, and the lower notes have suffered by the severe training of the upper register. But the lady manages it with a great deal of art. Her intonation is correct, her runs are clear, and her shake is exceedingly good. Her singing, in brief, is deficient in sympathetic quality rather than in proofs of intelligent culture. We do not think her selections were felicitous. The words of oratorio music are not grateful when spoken with a foreign accent, and the coarse allegro of the air from "Il Poliuto" sounded strangely amid the compositions on the bill. The instrumental numbers chosen were carefully rendered, though portions of the symphony, and especially the closing allegro, were handled with less delicacy than the string performers of the Philharmonic usually display.

SEASON OF ENGLISH OPERA.

The reader need hardly be reminded that the season of English opera at the Academy of Music will be commenced to-morrow evening. "Un Ballo in Maschera" will be first sung. To-morrow week, we believe, Mr. SANTLEY will be heard in "Zampa." The promise of the financial success of Mme. PAREPA-ROSA'S enterprise is cheering; the sale of seats is already large.

Home Gossip.

JANAUSCHEK was last week at Ford's Opera-house, in Baltimore.... Mr. and Mrs. FLORENCE were at the Holliday-street Theatre....Miss MAGGIE MITCHELL was last week at the National Theatre, in Washington....The Wyndham Comedy Company was last week in Milwaukee....Friday and Saturday, Mr. J. E. OWENS acted in Wilkesbarre.... Wednesday, Mr. OLE BULL played at Wilkesbarre....The Parepa-Rosa opera troupe sang last week in Providence and in Hartford....Mrs. OATES and her company were last week in Savannah....Two Thomas concerts occur in Savannah on Tuesday and Wednesday....Mlle. AIMEE and her opera bouffe company perform at the St. James Theatre, in Boston, this week. ....Mr. FORREST acted last week in Pittsburg. ....Herr WACHTEL sings to-morrow evening in Cincinnati....Mr. and Mrs. BANDMANN were at Wood's Theatre....Miss CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN read last week in Chicago....The Elizabeth Daily Journal, of Monday last, prints the story appended: "On Saturday night, as the few who attended the Opera-house are aware, the itinerant Zoe Troupe played 'The French Spy.' Among the actors is a gentleman who went on the boards under the assumed name of J.W. Forrester, but whose real name was J. A.C. POLLOCK. While this POLLOCK was charming the audience another drama in which Mr. POLLOCK was principal actor was being played outside. The circumstances are as follows: A short time ago Mr. POLLOCK with the Zoe company played at Pittsburg. While there the actor and his acting captivated the heart of a Miss READ, daughter of Mr. ALEXANDER READ, of that city. The result was that Miss READ left her paternal home, and took up with POLLOCK, who married her under the assumed name of Forrester. As soon as the father of the girl found out the state of affairs he set out to find his erring daughter and bring her back to his home. For some time he followed the troupe, but did not overtake them till they arrived in this city on Saturday last. Of course a row immediately ensued. The old gentleman was determined to take his daughter home, and the daughter was willing to be taken home, but POLLOCK insisted that his wife should go with him. Matters went on for an hour or two, when from words it came to blows, the indignant father dealing POLLOCK such a blow in the face as sent him reeling. Justice FAIRBANK was then resorted to, and a warrant issued for READ'S arrest. This was effected at about 6 o'clock by Sergt. MILLER, and, as the other parties were interested, they were also taken in charge. Being in the hands of the officers of the law somewhat cooled the excitement of all there, and they were constrained to talk the matter over calmly. The result was that the father triumphed, and returned to Pittsburg that same night with his daughter. The girl thus taken from her home is only seventeen years old."....The San Francisco Daily Evening Post contains the following account of affairs at the local Chinese theatre: "For the last week or two there has been considerable excitement and curiosity among our theatre-going Celestial population on account of a grand treat which the managers of the Gu Hing Toy Theatre on Jackson-street were preparing for the inauguration of the holiday season which precedes the Chinese New-Year. As is well known, Chinese custom, which is as inflexible as the laws of the Medes and Persians, prohibits the appearance of women on the stage. Nevertheless, this Chinese custom has some exceptions. The High Board of Rites and Ceremonies, or the grand Censorship of Celestial Manners, whatever it is called, which, from the Imperial City of Pekin, gives law in such matters to the Chinese world, has authority to grant permission for the appearance of females upon the stage during certain seasons of the year when the joyousness of the grand holidays is supposed to relax somewhat ordinary rules. This permission is seldom extended, but when once given it is never recalled. The managers of the Gu Hing Toy Theatre, wishing to give their patrons a grand sensation for the holidays, have succeeded in getting from the High Old Mandarins of the many titles at Pekin, a permit upon the veritable yellow paper giving them permission to have women upon their stage, and for two or three weeks past the Chinese play-bills, which to untutored Melican eyes look like gigantic 'washee receipts,' or tea chest labels, have announced the fact in the most enticing language that on Wednesday evening 'real Chinese women' would make their first appearance upon the American stage. On Wednesday evening, therefore, the Jackson-street Theatre was crowded from pit to gallery, the special Chinese reporter of the Evening Post being snugly ensconced in a seat of honor. The prices of admission at the Chinese Theatre are somewhat less than at the California or Metropolitan, the charge to 'foreign devils' being but fifty cents, while Celestials pay but twenty-five cents for the privilege of witnessing the whole performance, from 7 in the evening to 2 in the morning. At 9 o'clock the charge is reduced to twenty cents, and after 10 o'clock any Chinese man or woman may enter and sit out the remaining five hours 'for the insignificant sum of fifteen cents. Notwithstanding these low prices, the Chinese Theatre maintains a company of eighty regular performers. The grand Chinese drama with which the Gu Hing Toy Theatre opened on Wednesday night, is entitled 'The Disobedient Child,' or 'The Marriage of the Strong Woman.' The acting, to our untutored eyes, seemed perfectly natural, and the women seemed at home on the stage. In the scene where the condemned meet, the style of the acting was perfectly free from that strain that is often seen on the American stage. One of the actresses was a young girl, she must have been a success, as she created quite an excitement among the Chinese (who never applaud) by her acting. In her singing, motions and everything she seemed as perfect as the older actors. The dresses, which were in exact imitation of the word in China at the present day, were simply magnificent, and cost, we were informed, from $100 to $800 apiece. In the second piece, in which the women characters are assumed by men, some of the most difficult acrobatic feats we have ever witnessed were performed. Although we have seen the Japanese, and all acrobats of renown, yet we were astonished at the daring feats and the seeming carelessness of the performers. They cannot be described, but must be seen."

Foreign Notes.

The tenor, COLIN, of the Paris Grand Opera, is dead. He was only thirty-one....The Pall Mall Gazette remarks that it is difficult to form any definite notion as to the worth of Signor VERDI'S latest opera from the accounts published in the French newspapers. A recognized critic, M. REYER, of the Journal des Débats, has been invited to be present, but after a long and bad passage he arrived at Cairo only just in time to hear the first performance, which, for a recognized critic, is not enough to base an opinion upon. He at once, however, made up his mind about the scenery, which is more magnificent, it appears, than any that has ever been seen—at least in recent times—at the Paris Opera. As to the music of "Aïda," all we are told amounts to very little, and that little not to its advantage. Thus it is said to be more in the style of "Don Carlos" than of the "Trovatore." An anonymous scribbler, without any pretensions to the character of a regular critic, writes with more freedom about the new work, and declares it to be heavy. The composer, he says, has taken infinite pains to give an Egyptian character to the music of his Egyptian subject; and we can fancy the dismal modes into which such a hopeless endeavor would lead him. An Egyptianized Italian opera is about as inconceivable a thing as an Italianized Egyptian temple; but, inconceivable or not, it exists; and having been presented to the public of Cairo, is, it seems, to be introduced to that of Milan.... The Orchestra announces the death of Mr. WALTER SAMUEL MEDEN, the actor who, many years ago, served Mme. VESTRIS as acting manager of Covent Garden, and was for some years partner with Mr. ROBSON at the Olympic. He afterward became acting manager of the St. James. When Miss ALLEYNE was lessee of the Globe Theatre, Mr. EMDEN was chosen acting manager, but he soon resigned the appointment, and this was the last office he filled.... The Teatro Apollo, at Rome, opened on the 26th ult. with HALEVY'S "Juive," which, being badly executed, proved a half failure. It appears that certain people are scandalized that the Cardinal should be represented as having a daughter and as humiliating himself before a Jew.....At Brussels the Academy of the Fine Arts has named as musical members M. GEVAERT, chapel-master to the King and Director of the Conservatoire; M. BOSSELET, already correspondent; and M. LIMNANDER, composer, in place of the late MM. FETIS, HAUSSENS and SOUBRE; also M. GOUNOD, of Paris, and M. BASEVI, of Florence, as foreign associates, to succeed MM AUBER and MERCADANTE. ....The Pall Mall Gazette says: "News of the Wagnerian Theatre of the Future continues to arrive. The municipality of Baden has made a representation to the effect that that delightful watering-place possessed many advantages as a centre of attraction for musical amateurs over Baireuth. But Bavaria, if not precisely the native land of the Wagnerian drama, is at least the country in which it grew up and gained strength; and Bavarian Baireuth is its chosen home. The commission intrusted with the duty of selecting a site for the great musical and dramatic edifice has already accomplished its task, and the hill of Stuckberg, near the Brandenburg Gate, is the spot fixed upon. Some difficulty, it appears, had arisen as to the means of accommodating the visitors to the theatre, who will, it is expected, during the theatrical season, swell the population to an almost inconvenient extent. Lodging-houses, however, are being erected for them in the Brandenburg quarter, where from two to three thousand rooms or suites of apartments will be made ready for the opening of the theatre, which is not expected to take place before the year after next".....The plot of the new play at the Paris Odéon is thus described: "'Mlle. Aïssé' is a drama in four acts, by the lamented poet, LOUIS BOUILHET. It is woven out of the well-known legend of the young Circassian maid who lived in the time of the Regency, under the mysterious vail of the daughters of the East. Aïssé is said to have been stolen by the Turks from the burning palace of her father, and taken to the slave market at Constantinople, where she was bought by M. DE FERRIOL, Ambassador of LOUIS XIV., and sent by him to his family in France, with the intention of becoming her lover when the lovely child grew up to womanhood. It is just at this time that the poet commences his story, and presents to us Aïssé, left by her protector with a small fortune, and a victim to his family, who dislike her, and determine upon her ruin by presenting her to the Regent. Aïssé, however, loves a young chevalier, destined for the Order of Malta, but she is induced by the family to believe herself unworthy of him, and to attend a fête at Court in her national costume. She flies from the palace when the intentions of her pretended friends become apparent to her, but is discovered in her retreat by the chevalier, who, in his turn, is pursued by the Regent, when the Commander of the Order of Malta appears and casts his cloak around him. The effect of the white cross appears to be magical, as the young lover immediately retreats without once looking back upon his betrothed, who falls dead upon the stage. The denouement is not only contrary to historical truth, but is grotesque in its abruptness and unsatisfactory in its conclusion. No murmuring or opposition on the part of the public was, however, heard, from respect to the memory of M. BOUILHET."

"KING CARROT."

The critic of Galignani's Messenger supplies the following article in relation to MM. SARDOU and OFFENBACH'S new work: "The long-announced féerie, 'Le Roi Carotte,' made its first appearance here on Monday night, and was enthusiastically received. Less could scarcely be expected from the great reputation of the authors—SARDOU for the libretto, and OFFENBACH for the music; but, to be just, we must also assign the highest praise to the scene-painters, machinists, dress-makers and property-furnishers, as a great part of the success devolves on those most useful, but unknown assistants. As to the text, no great effort has evidently been made to render it sparkling and effective, and in some places the pruning-knife may be used with advantage; but the mise en scène is charming, and the pageantry and general spectacle is surprisingly beautiful. The plot turns on the expulsion of Prince Fridolin (MASSET) from his States by a hideously-deformed monster, King Carotte (VICINI,) and the subsequent adventures of the fugitive while endeavoring to recover his kingdom. The fairy portion of the piece—the wonderful transformations, glittering palaces and halls of dazzling light, have their origin in the antagonism of a malevolent fury, Colognante, (Mlle. MARIANI,) hostile to Fridolin, and a well-intentioned magician Quiribibi, (AURELE,) who protects him. The first scene represents a market-place in a German town, where the Prince, who is courting his fiancée, the Princess Ouneyonde (Mlle. JUDIC) from Paris, appears in disguise to form a judgment for himself of the lady before her official reception. But she, having a similar design, enters in a riding-habit, displays a variety of accomplishments, such as smoking, drinking beer, talking slang, singing rather loose stanzas, and, in fact, enchants the Prince. They make themselves known to each other, and he, in the joy of his heart, invites the crowd to come up to the palace and take part in a gigantic punch. The whole party shortly after meet in the ancient hall of the building, where a number of coats of mail are arranged, and there make such a disturbance that the supposed occupants of the armor in the olden days are quite scandalized, and, with a most terrific displeasure, in fairly-marked chorus. The guests retire in affright, and the Prince, being overcome by the surprise, combined with the excess of liquor which he had imbibed, jumps into the kitchen garden of King Carotte, his next-door neighbor. The fairy here animates all the vegetables, and with them the King sets out to dethrone the Prince. This is easily effected, and the Princess Cuneyonde at once falls in love with the new monarch, and, in complete unison with all the ministers and courtiers, turns her back on the old; this latter, in consequence, is forced to fly, and with a faithful friend, Robin (Mlle. ZULMA BOURMAN,) and one page named Rosier (Mlle. SEVESTE,) commences his adventures. On application to Quiribibi he learns that what can alone aid him is Solomon's Seal, for more than 1,700 years hidden in the ruins of Pompeii. Thither he resorts, and finds everything dull, dreary and inanimate, without the slightest prospect existing of finding the precious talisman, when Robin suggests that, as he has himself obtained from the magician the power of performing certain minor tricks, he shall reanimate the buried city, and present it as it was seen before the terrible shower of ashes from Mount Vesuvius had concealed it from mortal sight. A wave of the wand in an instant conforms the mass of ruins into an animated, living capital, crowded with a busy throng in the full enjoyment of a Roman holiday. Nothing can possibly be more effective than this beautiful scene, and the classical scholar will return there again and again to witness the living realization of scenes which his early training had frequently suggested to his youthful imagination. Warriors, slaves, fashionables of the day, flute-players, an Edile, a gigantic gladiator, the courtesan Corinna, on her car, with two white horses caparisoned in purple, her barbarian attendants following; fruit-sellers, flower-girls, traders from Sicily and the East displaying their richest silks and most precious curiosities—all are there, bathed in brightest sunshine, all so gay and so seemingly happy that no one can wonder that the Prince almost forgot the magic seal of the wisest of men. And not he only, but the whole audience appeared to have lost all thought of everything but the surpassing loveliness of the scene before them—one quite sufficient to insure the success of any theatrical representation. But several others were in store; for the travelers, by dint of inquiry, at last obtain the mighty relic and depart. Not, however, to find a pleasant journey before them, but to undergo many sad vicissitudes of fortune from the spite and uncharitableness of the malignant fairy. Thus they have to visit the Kingdom of the Ants, where the insects dance ballets of indescribable lightness, those of the bees being the most aerial; and to enter the Island of the Apes, where every description of monkey, from the diminutive ouistiti to the gigantic gorilla, disport among the branches of the never-ending forest. More wonders are to be spoken of—for what may not be produced with the Seal of Solomon!—but the catalogue would be too long for our space, and would, besides, detain our readers too long from the pleasing intelligence that Fridolin regains his kingdom and marries, not the fast young lady who had declared for King Carotte, but another, who, in the disguise of the page, had accompanied her much-loved master in all his wanderings. The music was charmingly executed by Mlles. ZULMA, SEVESTE, and JUDIC, and several of the airs are sure to be popular. As to the piece itself, it may safely reckon on reaching the evenings of the coming Summer."

FINE ARTS.

Second Notice of the Water-Color Exhibition at the Academy of Design—The Schaus Gallery—Picture Sales.

We have already referred to some of the principal pictures of the present Water-color Exhibition on view in the north room, and in this notice we shall call attention to those in the east room and corridor, as well as a few omitted in our notice of the north room. First among these are PAUL MARTEN'S two small pictures, (Nos. 201 and 202,) which exemplify in a striking manner how much a true artist can put on a few square inches of paper. Mr. J. G. BROWN is represented by "The Swing," (No. 220,) which is much better than some of Mr. BROWN'S oil-paintings that we could mention. CHAS. C. WARD has a clever little picture entitled "Odd or Even?" and Mr. G. A. GILBERT "The Lake of Lucerne," (No. 230,) which we take to be the strongest and best picture by which this artist is represented. Mr. A. H. WYANT, who is so strong in oils, appears rather weak in water colors. He has one or two pleasing effects, however, "Gathering Shells" being the best. HAMMAN'S "Mother and Child," (No. 265,) is good, though sketchy. Miss FISHER sends "A Robin's Breakfast," (No. 272,) which is carefully painted, and Miss GILBERT "Autumn's Last Gift," (No. 287,) to which the same remark applies. Mr. SCOTT has an execrable "Lady Macbeth," and Mr. JOHN S. DAVIS, a sketchy though striking "Bear Hunt." Mrs. KECKNEY'S "Loch Katrine" is good in color, and Mr. J. M. FALCONER'S "Twilight" effective.

Passing to the east room, we come to a view of "Windsor," by Mr. BELLOWS, which is rather weak for him, but he makes amends for this by his study of "Byash Church, Kent," (No. 372.) This is one of Mr. BELLOWS' most charming works, and is evidently, as he terms it, a study. The light falling through the trees on the church walls is most effectively given. Mr. SAMUEL COLMAN'S "Tappan Zee" is better than some of his larger works. A small painting by CALAME, (No. 339,) entitled "Switzerland," though beautifully executed, is certainly untruthful in color, and the aerial perspective is at fault. There is little in it that reminds us of Swiss scenery. It is rather Italian. T. ROWBOTHAM, who stands in the front rank of the English water-color school, is represented by a small sketch of Welsh scenery, as we take it, (No. 346.) It is cold and artificial—a studio picture, which does not bear analysis. No. 359, "The Improvisatoré," by DEL. ACQUA represents a story-teller, in this instance a man of rank and refinement apparently, weaving his tissue of romance in the presence of a large party of ladies and ecclesiastics. The expression and attitude of the principal figure are finely given, and the accessories most carefully painted. It is certainly the finest figure piece in the collection.

JOHN ABSOLON, another English artist of deserved reputation, sends "A Stroll Through the Corn Fields," (No. 369.) Though slightly painted, it is very charming and attracts much attention. Mr. KNIGHT sends two views in Kent, England, both of which are deserving of notice. VARLEY, a contemporary of TURNER'S, and the father of the English school of water-colorists, is represented by two small pictures. Mr. EDWARD MORAN, of Philadelphia, has a fine freely painted marine piece. Old DAVID COX, of London, whose slap-dash method excited for some time the ridicule of his brother artists and the critics, has a small river view and a landscape, (Nos. 517 and 532,) which will be found in the corridor. They forcibly exemplify his broad, free method, in which effects are everything and finish nothing. Some pictures by J. HOCH, KRUSEMAN VAN ELTEN, Mrs. CAROLINE CARSON and others, also merit attention.

We miss from the catalogue the names of Cranch, Cropsey, Darley, T. W. Wood, Fredericks, La Farge, Lumley, William Magrath and Van Ingen, who have heretofore been notable contributors, and, judging from the works of those artists represented, we are forced to the conclusion that, although this is by very far the most interesting water-color exhibition ever opened in this City, yet, so far as our own artists are concerned, it is not equal to that of last year.

THE SCHAUS GALLERY.

Our picture galleries have never, within our recollection, presented so many attractions as at present. At SCHAUS' we find a splendid landscape by CALAME, one of his strongest and most truthful works, a large cattle piece by VERBOECKHOVEN, and one by ROSA BONHEUR, which has all the characteristics of this artist's style. DIAZ is represented by a storm scene, in which, though the sky is certainly a little painty, a striking effect is introduced. ERSKINE NICOL has two pictures, "Collecting his Thoughts" and "Yours to Command." The first represents a hard-fisted son of the Green Isle, setting down to indite a letter, and in the second we have the same individual, with his task nearly accomplished, his lips and tongue being fearfully twisted in his calligraphic efforts. Both are strong pictures, broadly and freely painted. DIEZ, a well-known artist, has a hunting scene, with some subtle gradations of color and light and shade; and MUNTHE, a Dusseldorf artist, two strong and truthful landscapes. ROWBOTHAM, who occupies a high position among the English water-color artists, is represented by a large view of Italian scenery, brilliant in color, highly effective, and most carefully finished. Those who wish to see to what perfection the art of water-color painting may be brought, as compared with oil, should examine this work of ROWBOTHAM'S, and also Mr. SCHAUS' portfolio of drawings by HARDY, PENLEY and others. Among the novelties in the gallery we notice some fine specimens of photo-relievos, which are attracting much attention. Altogether we may say that the gallery at the present time will richly repay those who visit it.

PICTURE SALE.

We have, heretofore, referred briefly to the sale of the Wellington and Williams and Everett Galleries, which will take place at Clinton Hall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings next. A number of out-of-town picture-buyers will attend, and we understand that there will be a lively competition for the Gallait, Gerome, Zamacois, Chaplin and Carl Becker. For the Gallait a large price has been offered at private sale and refused. The Messrs. LEAVITT have adopted the plan of issuing tickets for seats at the sale, and thus those who really desire to attend and with an idea of becoming purchasers can be accommodated by applying at the office previous to the day of sale.

Another Whisky Raid in the Fifth Ward.

Yesterday morning the revenue officers and the Police made a raid in the Fifth Ward, and seized property valued at $500. Several stills were found on the premises, some of them having been recently used. In one case a cistern was found carefully concealed under a sleigh, in which were about sixty barrels of rum. Gen. JOURDAN expresses the belief that the illicit traffic has received its death-blow, and that with the continued support of the Police, the business will soon be crushed.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Special Plea for the Small-Pox Hospital.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It would be a public calamity to frighten small-pox patients from going to Blackwell's Island, unless a pest-house were established elsewhere. Now, I have just had small-pox, and was treated on Blackwell's Island. Perhaps my experience will be of public interest. I suppose the small-pox was communicated to me on the 26th ultimo, but on Dec. 30 I visited a patient who had had this complaint for two weeks, in a large, crowded tenement-house in the most populous portion of the City. Upon entering the patient's room, I was actually stifled by the stench of small-pox, which had been bottled up for two weeks. Almost unable to breathe, I opened a window at once; but to escape having the malady from such an atmosphere, would have required a miracle. I have had patients with small-pox come to me for examination who had been walking around among their friends, riding in the cars, &c., for a fortnight; and, indeed, were convalescing before they thought of a hospital. Add to the number ignorant of the character of their malady, a host of people who concoct every possible expedient for escaping a trip to Blackwell's Island, and think when this threatening epidemic of small-pox will be controlled. During the six days I was in the hospital, not being confined to my room, for my attack was quite light, I was enabled to examine carefully into the whole management of the institution, and observe the treatment and care of its inmates. I feel it my duty as a citizen and a medical man to assure those unfortunate enough to be taken with small-pox, as well as their numerous anxious friends, that patients are as well cared for in the small-pox hospital as in any institution of the same kind in the country. My personal experience with hospitals as house physician, and as visitor in many institutions here and abroad, enables me to judge as to the practical wants of patients, and with the exception of the overcrowding, the small-pox hospital is undoubtedly well conducted.

The hospital is overcrowded; this is not to be denied. Although it is not true that more than one patient occupies a bed, still too many are compelled to sleep in the same apartment. But this want has been recognized, and a fine large wooden pavilion is in the course of construction, which will accommodate sixty patients and meet every demand for sufficient hospital room. Wood is well-known to be the best material for lazarets, and indeed all hospitals. And this commodious, decent structure, which will be ready for the reception of patients in two weeks, will be devoted to the female patients who do not pay board, while the stone building, or hospital proper, will be reserved for boarders, paying from $5 to $10 weekly. This arrangement will afford those who can pay a moderate price all the comforts of home—a neat single room, excellent diet, and special attendance.

It is but reasonable to presume that a person who cannot pay $5 weekly for two or three weeks, is one who is accustomed to poor diet and accommodations at his own residence in the City. Now, these persons are better fed at the Small-pox Hospital than in any other institution under the care of the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction, and in all probability, as well as at their own homes.

The physicians of the Small-pox Hospital, besides being zealous and attentive, are thoroughly competent, from education and experience, to render the best medical aid. These two medical gentlemen visit the wards always twice, daily; and generally from three to five times. To spend hours attending patients sick with small-pox requires a good heart and a strong stomach, and deserves, at least, respect from the public, who should rejoice that persons could be found that take a warm interest in such a repulsive malady as this plague—small-pox.

As for the nurses, let me say, they are as good as can be obtained for twice their present wages; and they are not inferior in any respect to the general class of attendants in all hospitals.

It may console the timid to know that but one person in twenty exposed to small-pox will contract it. Neither of the physicians at the Small-pox Hospital has had the disease in any shape, although both have been exposed to it in its worst forms for nearly a year. An orderly who has attended small-pox for five years has never been affected in the least.

It is deplored by some that the Board of Health has not entire charge of the Small-pox Hospital. I would like to remind the public that it is not fair or judicious to expect too much from any one Department, and a recent visit to poor sick emigrants in the lower part of Mulberry-street, together with a more recent one to several in Baxter-street, convinced me that the Board of Health had a grand, good work before them, for unless the unprecedented filth of the City is removed, next Summer there will come, in all human probability, a grim visitor from Asia—the prince of deadly maladies—and the name of small-pox will be forgotten in the august presence of Asiatic cholera.

The Bartlett Street-Lamps.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of today there appears in your article upon the "Disbursements of the Bureau of Lamps and Gas," statements made in relation to the new street-lamp, of which I am the patentee and manufacturer, which tend to do me and my business great injury. In the first place, I wish it to be distinctly understood that this new lamp has not or never had any connection with any Ring whatsoever. It has been adopted simply from its great merit, after complete and careful trial. As your informant says: "The patent lamps adopted by the Department of Parks, which are to be seen in the up-town boulevards and in the City Parks, cost $25 each." Now this is too ridiculous a statement to expect any one to believe true. You can easily see by a visit to the Department, that this new lamp does not cost the City one-quarter so much sum, and that the iron-framed do not cost the City by much by twenty-five per cent. as your (willing) informant charges the City for those he supplies. As for cost for repairs, or danger of such by breakage, I can only say, that after a year's trial, where these new lamps have been supplied in place of the old styles, and in the most exposed districts of the City, the aggregate cost of repairs is found to be much less for repairs than for the old style lamps. The much greater thickness of the glass, the peculiar form causing a missile, except coming with great force in contact, to glance off from it; and last, but not least, the greater beauty of the lamp and its appearance when burning, and the lamp to be very much more respected in every way than the old lamps. The rain falling upon the glass when the lamp is lighted has never had the slightest injurious effect upon it. The lamp has withstood all tests beyond my most sanguine expectations. J. W. BARTLETT.

No. 569 BROADWAY, New-York, Friday, Feb. 2, 1872.

In order to test the statements denied in the above letter, inquiries were made at the Department of Parks, and it was learned that not only did Mr. DOYLE speak truthfully when he said that the lamps cost the City $25 each, but that they cost even a much greater sum than was stated in the TIMES, as will be seen by the following figures, obtained at the Department of Parks, which has exclusive control over the erection of lamps of the style referred to:

Cost of post	$25 00
Cost of lamps, first quality	7 22
Cost of lamps, second quality	6 60
Cost of iron frame in which the lamp is inserted	1 00
Cost of nuts and bolts	25

This does not include the burner, which has to be paid for in addition to the above. So we find that instead of costing the City twenty-five dollars, as Mr. DOYLE said, these expensive affairs actually cost when the cheapest quality used, $32 75 each, and when a trifle more ornamental kind are set up they cost, without the gas burner, seventy-five cents additional, or the extravagant sum of $33 50. The claim of the patentee in regard to the durability of the lamps, seems to be equally as erroneous as the one in regard to their cost. From the Parks Department it was learned that the lamps are frequently cracked or broken, and being of a single piece cannot be mended, but at once become a loss and must be replaced by others. Being circular, when the gas is turned on they immediately fill, and unless the lighter is remarkably expeditious in applying the taper, the glass is cracked by the explosion which is certain to follow. It is an undeniable fact that many have been broken in this manner, and it is uncontradicted that others have been broken in the manner stated in the TIMES, (by the heated glass coming in contact with the rain,) although a record of such breakages is not kept in the Department.

Statistics of Fires in January—Report to the Police Commissioners.

Fire-Marshal McSPEDON yesterday made a report of fires occurring during January, showing that there were 137 fires during the month, involving a loss of $43,800 on buildings, and $281,899 on stock. The amount of insurance on buildings was $528,300, and on stock $582,800; uninsured loss, $18,235. The principal causes of the fires were as follows: Carelessness of occupants' employes, in using lights, fire, &c., 57; defective flues and heating arrangements, 12; kerosene and liquid gas, 18; overheated stoves, 8; gas-light setting fire to goods and curtains, 8.

Chief Engineer PERLEY yesterday submitted his report to the Fire Commissioners for the year, and claims that while there had been an increase of twelve per cent. in the number of fires as compared with the same period last year, there had been a decrease of six per cent. in the losses incurred.

ILLUSIONS.

Modern Mirabeau vs. Mechanics and Legerdemain.

In a late issue we had occasion to notice the very spirited controversy now going on in some of the English scientific journals on the subject of some late developments of spiritualism, or as others are disposed to consider it a new form of mento-physical force to which the name "Psychic" has been given by the able chemist, Mr. CROOKES, who has lately ventured to become its investigator. In face of the various and discordant opinions which are being expressed on this subject by some of the first scientific men of the age, it is interesting to see an entirely new method of discussion adopted by one of our countrymen, who brings to the work a rare combination of advantageous conditions.

Mr. COLEMAN SELLERS, who is well known to the profession as one of our first mechanical engineers, and among his intimate friends as a proficient in the mysteries of legerdemain, recently delivered a lecture on "Illusions" at the Philadelphia High School, in aid of a world-renowned charity, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The ground taken by this gentleman, whose ability, both as an engineer and as an expert in the deceptive art, gives such an expression of opinion special weight, was briefly as follows: There may be such a thing as the manifestation in physical effects of superphysical, or "spiritual," or psychic force, but in an experience of twenty years, and with every effort to follow up and personally investigate reported manifestations of such a character, I have never encountered any thing which I could not reproduce by a judicious application of legerdemain. The ease with which the most expert observers can be deceived, if not skilled in this special subject, is by no means generally appreciated, and it is my opinion that no one without such knowledge is at all competent as an investigator of the phenomena in question. The ablest scientific man will be as easily deceived as another, and his ability misapplied in efforts to connect and explain the pseudo-phenomena which he thinks he has observed.

In proof of these assertions Mr. SELLERS proceeded to exhibit all the prominent feats of modern spiritualism, such as the loosing of cords by which the performer is bound hand and foot, as practiced by the DAVENPORT BROTHERS; the table rappings, and spiritual writing in answer to mental questions, as exhibited by the regular "mediums," and the extraction of music from an accordion held upside down in the hand, and the loss of weight in a bar of wood, as exhibited in England by Mr. HOME, and investigated and described by Dr. CROOKES.

Besides these he showed a number of feats which out-Heroded Herod in the way of excelling each of these in kind. Thus his hands being firmly tied together by a spectator, and a solid iron ring placed on his lap, an instant's covering with a handkerchief sufficed for the transfer of the ring to his wrist, though once there it was only with great effort that it could be removed over the hand. Again, a heavy iron rod was made to float and vibrate, as if by electric force, between his outspread hands, and a like power was conferred upon a "magnetized" spectator.

Time and space would fail us to describe in detail even a part of the wonderful things accomplished, and we can only hope that Mr. SELLERS will continue to apply his "practical method" to this subject, and may be persuaded to afford others opportunity of witnessing some of his results.

DUTCH HEINRICH'S CASE.

The Outlaw Preparing to Slip the Meshes of the Law—Some More Detective Singularities.

Dutch HEINRICH has already begun an aggressive campaign for his liberty, and is employing the tactics which have so often been successful in extricating him from unpleasant dilemmas. He has demanded an examination, which, being a matter of right, Justice HOGAN was forced to grant, and it has been set down for Monday of next week. Dutch HEINRICH is so far like the older WELLER, that he is a firm believer in the efficacy of an alibi under all circumstances, and it is stated that he intends to offer evidence that he was somewhere else at the time, when three witnesses are certain they saw him in the office No. 41 Cedar-street. This little game has been played so often by the notorious marauder, and has so often served to rescue him from the hands of justice that he sees no reason why it should not again answer his purpose. But whether his alibi will stand the test, to prove satisfactory or not, the experienced thief knows perfectly well that by demanding an examination and offering to prove the alibi he can postpone a trial by jury and exhaust the patience of his prosecutor, and thus in the end escape a term in Sing Sing. It is not known that he is acting under the direction of the detectives at Police Head-quarters, but it is certain that since the date of the Cedar-street robbery he has been seen in and near the Mulberry-street building in company with those singular officers of justice, to be found in Room No. 12. A few days ago he was seen walking in Houston-street, in close consultation with a noted detective, and during last week he was in a drinking-saloon in the neighborhood of Head-quarters, with another detective. On this occasion Dutch was disguised to a slight extent by a pair of green goggles, and seemed to have important business with his companion; but those who saw the singular conference were unable to catch the clue to what it was that absorbed at this moment, when Dutch has fallen into temporary inconvenience, without the intervention of any detective, that some weeks ago he was taken into Police Head-quarters and advised to stop his operations, or he would be "collared," as the detectives elegantly designate an arrest. Dutch has been pegging away at his industriously ever since that day, but has never been "collared." The shrewd twinkle in his eye as he left the building on that occasion showed that he fully appreciated the character of the threat.

A Negro Woman's Bequest to a Theological School.

From the New-Haven Journal, Feb. 3.

Mrs. MARY A. GOODMAN, a colored woman of this city, died recently, leaving her whole property, about $5,000, to the Scholarship Fund of the Theological School here, with the idea of aiding colored young men in their studies for the ministry. This woman has given the savings of a long life spent in such hard toil as washing and domestic service. A coorrespondent says of her: "Herself a member and regular attendant of the College-street Church, and thus accustomed to intelligent preaching, she felt that the time was coming, in the rapid progress of her race and people, when they would require a more highly-educated ministry, and it was after full deliberation and with real pleasure that she consecrated to this object, nearly a year since, the entire earnings of her life." As she had provided no place of burial for herself, she was fully interred in the lot in the old cemetery belonging to the University of which she has become a benefactor.

Never-failing Safety and Success.—MRS

NEW-YORK CITY NEWS.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE.

The Investigation Continued Yesterday—Testimony of Gen. Hillyer and Others—Want of Harmony Among the Senators.

The Committee of the Senate on Retrenchment met again yesterday, at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, Senator BUCKINGHAM in the chair.

Gen. HILLYER, who was examined the previous day, was recalled, and stated in reference to the evidence of MUDGETT, that while in Washington Gen. COCHRANE told him that MUDGETT said Gen. PORTER was receiving money from the General Order business of New-York. On hearing this he mentioned it to Col. LEET, who informed Gen. PORTER of the matter.

To Senator Casserly—It was about 10½ o'clock at night when Col. LEET called my attention to this matter. My relations with Gen. GRANT are quite friendly, and they were very agreeable while I was a member of his staff. I spoke to Col. LEET on the General Order business a week ago in the White House. I had expected to speak about the matter on going up there.

Q.—You expected, when going to Washington, to see Gen. GRANT, and to elicit the explanations on this subject which it would be for his interest to make? A.—There was nothing said about my testimony. I went to see Gen. GRANT after it was arranged I would be examined, and I thought an explanation of Col. LEET's connection with the General Order business would be desirable. I think Gen. GRANT expressed his disapproval of the Leet-Bixby business. I recollect the statement of the Herald's Washington correspondent as to the disappointment of Gen. GRANT's friends at my important evidence not being taken. I spoke about the matter to four or five gentlemen, one of whom was connected with the Herald. I had a conversation with Gen. PORTER, in which he said the President disapproved of Col. LEET having anything to do with the New-York Custom-house, preferring that he should have accepted the position of Superintendent of the Cameron Iron-works in Pennsylvania. I knew Col. LEET to be a good business man, and, before I left, Gen. GRANT became reconciled at his bidding for the Custom-house business. The bidding was done in the name of Mr. HOWE, a prominent politician. I don't think the President knew of Col. LEET's arrangements until after the Committee of February. Col. LEET was in the army at the time he entered the business, but being on leave of absence I considered it legitimate.

Senator Casserly—I am a civilian, and my perceptions of the transactions differ from those of you gentlemen of the sword.

Witness—But the law was passed by civilians under which the six months' leave is given.

Senator Casserly—Not by me; it came from another quarter.

Senator Stewart—The law was passed expressly to enable them to leave the army.

Senator Casserly—I deny that the law intended, while a man wears the honorable uniform of a United States officer and draws pay—a diminished pay, it is true—he could engage in business under another department of the Government for the sake of lucre.

Witness—Oh, his resignation was accepted, as I consider, and irrevocable.

Senator Bayard—But he told us himself that he got it recalled to have himself mustered out a month sooner that he might have a year's pay.

Senator STEWART here summed up the testimony of the witness in a series of questions, which were promptly answered.

Senator Bayard—I move that the stenographer, in transcribing his notes, distinguish between the questions of the Senator and the answers of the witness—that it be given as the understanding of the so-called counsel as to the testimony.

Senator Casserly—Senator STEWART's habit of coming in with leading questions involves the necessity of re-examining witnesses.

Senator Stewart (warmly)—I suppose it would be gratifying to some gentlemen to exclude me from the Committee altogether, but I must say I refrained for hours from asking questions because I thought the time had been squandered by remaining here spending the people's money after the witness has been exhausted.

Chairman—Do you withdraw your motion, Mr. BAYARD?

Senator Bayard—No, Sir.

Senator Stewart—I move as an amendment that the testimony of Senators CASSERLY and BAYARD be distinguished from that of the witness.

Senator Bayard—My motion was practical; if this is intended to render it futile I withdraw it.

Senator Casserly—Have I said anything to you which involved the idea that the Chief Magistrate was under the necessity of a personal explanation to the public? A.—No.

Senator Casserly—I think the President makes his statements of all such matters by his acts and by his life. You told me you made certain statements which appeared in the Herald next day? A.—I mentioned the matter and did not know the party was connected with the Herald. He asked me if I had any objections to its publication and I replied not.

CHARLES D. MOULIN, assistant weigher to JAMES M. THOMPSON, testified in reply to the Chairman, that he was present when a certain cargo of cannel coal was weighed for EDDY & ROGERS, and to his knowledge no one approached Mr. ROGERS and asked to have some of the coal sent to their houses.

WM. O. CLOYES, Inspector of Customs, sworn, said in answer to the Chairman that he was on the vessel when the coal of EDDY & ROGERS was discharged; the larger invoice of coal was for Mr. BENEDICT and the smaller for EDDY & ROGERS; Mr. BENEDICT went there to see if the lots were kept separate.

To Senator Bayard—I did not ask Mr. BENEDICT to send a load of coal to my house, and did not intimate that I would serve him if he did, or that I would injure him if he did not. I did not say it to Mr. ROGERS, nor did not hear any one say anything of the kind. I did not say to any one present that Mr. BENEDICT was a d—d mean old cuss, and that I would get square with him.

Mr. E. D. ROGERS was recalled, and said that Mr. CLOYES was the person referred to in his evidence already given.

A communication was received from the Chamber of Commerce stating a committee of seven from that body was appointed to confer with the Senate Committee as to the best means to be adopted to rectify the alleged abuses in the Custom-house.

B. G. JAYNE, Special Agent of the Treasury, related how, shortly after he reported for duty in 1869, he discovered that United States weighers were in the habit of defrauding the revenue by returning and swearing to false rolls of laborers, and by returning short weights in collusion with importers, and he had a number of them arrested, and the books and papers of thirty-two importers were seized. Some of the weighers were discharged, one turned State evidence, two were held and the indictments are pending. Suits were instituted against thirty of the importers. Suits resulted in judgment for an aggregate sum of $636,787 38. There was paid into the Treasury, $317,688 76. Government retained one-half. Of the other half, $154,490 94 was paid to informers, and an equal sum to the Collector, Surveyor, and Naval Officer.

The examination of the witness was here suspended, and the Committee adjourned to Monday morning.

The Brown Tragedy—Conflicting Verdicts of a Coroner's Jury.

An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner HERRMAN, in the case of ALFRED BROWN, aged seven years, who died from injuries alleged to have been inflicted by some of his playmates while he was returning from school to his home at No. 445 Eleventh-street. Two boys who also attended the school, testified positively that they saw ADOLPH WERNER, aged about twelve years, kick deceased twice in the side in front of the school-house in West Thirty-fifth-street, so that he fell with his head against an ash-barrel. It was also shown that deceased complained to his mother when he got home that he had been kicked by WERNER, and that one of the witnesses of the kicking mentioned the outrage to his parents when he returned home. On the other hand, the boy WERNER claimed that he was in the school-house yard at the time of the outrage, and produced several witnesses, who testified to that effect. It was shown by the testimony of Dr. JOHN BEACH that death had been caused by compression and concussion of the brain, the result of violence, and upon this evidence six of the jury rendered a verdict that the injuries had been received in some manner unknown, but Mr. S. W. BALDWIN, the seventh juror, brought in another verdict that the injuries had been received at the hands of ADOLPH WERNER. Coroner HERRMAN acted upon the latter verdict, and committed him to the custody of Capt. CAFFREY, of the Twentieth Precinct, to await further investigation.

The Kind of Retrenchment Needed in the Warehouse Department.

Col. R. DES ANGES, Chief Clerk of the Warehouse Department of the Custom-house, has made a report to Deputy Collector JAMES, of the Third Division. From this document it appears that while the work has steadily increased, the number of clerks employed to perform it is less than formerly. The bond accounts for the year ending Dec. 31, 1871, exceed the number in 1870 by 2,920, and those in 1868 by 4,307. Last year there were 21,706 warehouse entries, and 96,701 withdrawal entries. Only four clerks are employed to attend to this voluminous business, and they are constantly at work two hours earlier and later than office hours, to catch up the work at their desks. This is the same force that was employed ten years ago, when the work was much less.

Besides this increase in the warehouse entries, there has been an increase of 200 revenue warehouse entries and of 2,372 invoices, and the clerks in the liquidating department—the same numerical force as was employed ten years ago—have their hands full, too.

In the store book-keeper's department, likewise, the force is wholly inadequate to the increased volume of labor to be performed, unless the clerks work out of business hours. In fine the work of the office is three-fifths more than it was in 1867, and the number of clerks two less. Col. DES ANGES recommends that either the legal hours of labor be extended, or the force increased where an increase would not too much complicate the machinery.

THE WEST SIDE.

The Riverside and Morningside Parks—Past and Future Improvements on the West Side of the City—The Effect on Real Estate.

The work of improving the upper end of the island on the west side of the City, which has been retarded by reason of the Ring frauds and the empty treasury they left behind them, and to some extent by litigation in the Courts, has attracted such general attention and is of such wide interest that the following account of the present condition of the improvements will prove both timely and interesting:

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.

The first act of importance to improve the west side of the City at the upper end of the island, containing, as it does, 1,400 acres between Fifty-ninth-street and Manhattanville, was passed by the Legislature on the 13th of April, 1866, empowering the Central Park Commissioners to cause a survey to be made of that part of the City bounded on the north by One Hundred and Fifty-fifth-street; on the east by the westerly line of the Eighth-avenue, north of Eighty-second-street, and by the westerly line of the Ninth-avenue south of Eighty-second-street; southerly by the south line of Seventy-second-street east of the Tenth-avenue, and by the southerly line of Sixty-seventh-street, west of the Tenth-avenue, and westerly by the Hudson River, and to prepare maps and plans showing such changes in the width, direction and grades of the streets, avenues and roads then laid out within the area described, and in the pier and bulkhead lines established, as in their opinion could be made with benefit to the property affected, and also the boundaries of such streets, avenues, roads and public squares as in their opinion could be laid out or discontinued with like benefit, and to report the result of their labors to the Legislature.

Under this act the report of the Central Park Commission was made to the Legislature in March, 1867, and the final act was passed on the 24th of April following. In this act the Park Commissioners were given exclusive power to open or close such streets, avenues, roads, public squares or places, and to widen streets or avenues, and to change the grade thereof, as they might think proper, in the district bounded by the south side of One Hundred and Fifty-fifth-street, east by the westerly side of Eighth-avenue, south by the southerly side of Fifty-ninth-street, and west by the Hudson River, and also within a space of 350 feet in width surrounding the Central Park, the powers so conferred to cease on the 1st day of May, 1872.

The Commissioners filed their map on the 7th of March, 1868, fixing the grades of the streets and avenues between Fifty-ninth and

The following is a brief summary of the advantages offered to investors in the First Mortgage Bonds of the

LOGANSPORT, CRAWFORDSVILLE & SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY,

A road in Western Indiana, extending from Logansport to Rockville, a distance of ninety-two miles:

Two conditions are essential to a good investment—safety and profit.

The paramount consideration on the part of any one having money to invest should be the safety of the proposed investment.

The security on which these bonds are based consists of the very valuable franchises of the Company—a new and well-built railroad, of which the greater part is already in actual operation; suitable real estate in the growing cities on the line of the road, with substantial freight and passenger depots and other buildings, and a full equipment of complete passenger and freight trains.

The total amount of bonds issued is limited to $1,500,000, (being but $16,300 per mile,) constituting the first and only lien upon the entire property of the Company, and being but a small proportion of the intrinsic worth of the property mortgaged.

The location of the Logansport, Crawfordsville and South-western Railway is singularly fortunate for securing to it a large business. The road passes through a thickly populated and rich agricultural portion of Indiana, at present without railroad facilities, where abundant surplus products seeking Northern and Eastern markets, a large local passenger traffic, and connections with at least ten different railroads which supply both through and way freight, should amply provide for the prompt payment of interest on its bonds, and certainly insure its success.

The transportation of flour, grain, stavves, lumber, and live stock, must yield a large revenue. An important business will also be done in carrying building-stone from extensive quarries opened on the line of the road. A special demand for this stone arises from the fact that it is fire-proof, and not surpassed by any in respect to beauty and durability.

To all this there is to be added the heavy coal traffic, mainly with reference to which this road was projected, that must arise from penetrating for twelve miles the celebrated Block Coal field. This business alone should provide sufficient revenue for the entire interest on the bonded debt, and its payment may thus be considered doubly secured.

The road passes centrally through five of the wealthiest counties in the State, in each case through the county seat. Statistics show that "every railroad constructed adds five times its value to the property of the country." With the growth of these communities the traffic of the Logansport, Crawfordsville and South-western Railway will keep pace. Thus the safety of an investment in its securities will be day by day increasing, and they must continually advance in value.

Next in importance to the safety of the investment is its remuneration to the investor.

The securities of this Road were selected by us to be offered to our friends and investors generally, after a careful examination of many different railway enterprises, upon a conviction that the bonds of the Logansport, Crawfordsville and South-western Railway offer at once the utmost security, and the most liberal returns consistent with such safety.

These bonds are coupon and registered; bearing interest in gold, at eight per cent. per annum, free of Government tax, payable quarterly in New-York. A sinking fund is provided for the ultimate payment of the principal.

At the present rate of Government securities, none of them pay the investor 6 per cent., and some less than 5 per cent. per annum, upon the cost of investment. The bonds of the Logansport, Crawfordsville and South-western Railway, at their present offering price, pay almost twice as much interest to the investors as those of the United States.

For the present we offer these bonds at 95 and accrued interest in currency, or will exchange them for United States bonds or other marketable securities at the rates of the day; reserving the right to advance the price at any time without further notice.

Further and full particulars, with pamphlets, maps, &c., furnished by us upon personal or written application.

HORSES A

THE GRAY FORGERIES.

Hot Pursuit in England of the Perpetrator of the Crimes.

The Swindler Continuing his Depredations in London—He is Entertained by the Nobility as an American Millionaire.

Capt. THOMAS SIMPSON, who left this City on the Batavia last November, returned home on Saturday, and brings an interesting account of his search for WILLIAM E. GRAY, the noted Wall-street forger. On the Captain's arrival in London he visited Sir THOMAS HENRY, the chief Magistrate, and Superintendent WILLIAMSON and Inspector BAYLEY, of the Police, by whom he was offered every facility. The house in which GRAY lived was watched by the officers of the London Police carefully, until one night when they were rewarded by seeing a man approach who had a close resemblance to GRAY. The officers arrested him, when GRAY, (for it was he,) in the coolest manner possible, denied his identity, and said that the man they wanted was James Payson Morgan; who was then in the house, and would be produced by him if the officers would wait. To this proposition the officers consented, and GRAY went into the house and, coloring his hair and whiskers, made good his escape by the rear door. The scheme was managed most adroitly, and the best officers of the London force were humbugged by this swindler.

GRAY lived in magnificent style in London—kept his Brougham, dined with the Duke of NEWCASTLE and the Baron ROTHSCHILD, and surpassed the Prince of WALES in the elegance of his equipage. He was regarded as an American millionaire, and showered his gifts on every side with a lavish hand. He continued his swindling schemes with a boldness far exceeding that with which he met with so much success here, and on one occasion obtained an advance of £5,000 from a banker, on a forged telegram purporting to state that £30,000 had been placed to his credit in this City. Capt. SAMPSON, after GRAY's escape from his house in London, was misled by several reports which reached the London officers, and went to Brussels, Vienna and Paris, but was finally satisfied that GRAY was in London concealed, and that further search would be unavailing. He accordingly returned, and will now attempt to bring to justice some of GRAY's accomplices, leaving GRAY to pursue his course in London unmolested.

The history of the stupendous forgeries and swindles perpetrated by WILLIAM E. GRAY "& Co.," which culminated in his flight from justice early in December, 1869, will be read with interest even at this date. The following is a succinct sketch of GRAY's transactions, which at the time of their occurrence created an immense sensation in financial circles, and showed conclusively how easily confiding bankers may sometimes be victimized by an adroit scoundrel:

WILLIAM E. GRAY is the son of Rev. EDWARD H. GRAY, who was from 1861 to 1869 Chaplain of the United States Senate. Through the influence of his father WILLIAM obtained a position in the Fourth Auditor's office, and while there conducted himself in a perfectly honest manner. A desire for change led him to resign his position in 1866, and he came to this City provided with very strong recommendatory letters from Hon. LAFAYETTE S. FOSTER, then acting Vice-President, and several United States Senators. He obtained a position as cashier with the house of A. W. DIMMOCK & Co., No. 26 Pine-street, for the purpose of learning the business of a broker. Here he conducted himself in such a manner as to win the esteem of his employers, and he remained in their service until they suspended business, when he determined to open an office for himself. But he was destitute of capital, and therefore took desk-room in New-street, and engaged as attorney for Mr. J. D. SANDS, whose business in the Gold Room he transacted. In July, 1869, and while acting as Mr. SANDS' attorney, he became concerned in a little irregularity, misappropriating certain securities which were placed in his hands. About the same time he did a little business in the negotiation of "cross" Government bonds, but these irregularities were hushed up and all went smooth with him. About September of that year he formed the acquaintance of Mr. EUGENE FINK, a stock broker, who, finding that GRAY's acquaintances and associates were among the first class, desired to do business for him. GRAY then stated that he soon expected to have about $50,000 capital from an aunt in Maine, and then he would be glad to make an arrangement with Mr. FINK. While waiting for this windfall, Mr. FINK saw that GRAY was on intimate terms with Mr. CHARLES CALLENDAR, the National Bank Examiner, Gen. BUTLER, and Senators MORRILL, POMEROY and FOSTER, and naturally concluded that all of GRAY's representations, with respect to himself, were correct. In the latter part of November GRAY announced to Mr. FINK that he had secured the desired capital, and had determined to take the office No. 44 Broad-street, which had just been vacated—the same office, by the way, which is now occupied by WOODHULL & CLAFLIN. Accordingly, the office was fitted up, and Mr. FINK, at GRAY's request, took desk-room therein, in order that he might be on hand to execute orders for GRAY in the Stock and Mining Boards. The sign, "WILLIAM E. GRAY & CO." was put up, and everything was in readiness for business in a very short time. This, it appears, was the commencement of GRAY's plan to victimize the "street." GRAY told Mr. FINK that he had formed a "pool" for the purpose of operating in Quartz Hill mining stock, and at once gave Mr. FINK orders to execute for the "pool." Stocks were bought and promptly paid for, and all went on well and, so far as Mr. FINK knew, legitimately. But at the same time GRAY was a frequent borrower in the street on stock collaterals. As money was tight about that time, Mr. FINK thought nothing of it, but, when requested, would negotiate loans for the "firm," stating to parties who inquired that he (FINK) knew little about GRAY & Co., but that they must examine the securities offered as collateral, and if they were satisfied there let them do so. He, however, in every instance, declined to become responsible for the character of either the firm or the securities.

The carelessness of some of the parties who were victimized by GRAY may be imagined when it is stated that at this time GRAY was pledging as collateral altered bounty bonds and stolen United States securities. GRAY kept his account with the Bank of the Commonwealth, and would occasionally overdraw it—which appears to be allowable among Wall-street banking institutions—making it good before the close of bank hours. As security for such overdrafts he would leave with the teller certain securities, taking them up again when his amount should be made good. The short time that these securities were left with the bank did not permit of their critical examination, and the teller doubtless supposed that they were all right. Some of these securities were New York Bounty Fund Loans, which were originally of $1,000 each, but as subsequently appeared, they had been raised to $10,000 each by WM. H. GLOVER—who is now in Boston awaiting trial for the Boylston Bank robbery—and had been purchased by T. B. PRATT, who was a confederate of GLOVER. On Friday, Dec. 10, GRAY overdrew his account with the Bank of the Commonwealth, leaving a security three of these raised bonds representing $30,000. Early in the afternoon Mr. ELLIS, the Cashier, observing these bonds on the Teller's desk, and noticing that the denomination was large, had his suspicions excited and took them to the Manhattan Bank and showed them to Mr. HARBERGER. That gentleman pronounced them all right, but just as Mr. ELLIS was leaving the bank he met the clerk in charge of the transfer-books to whom he also showed them. The clerk, on glancing at his books saw at once that the bonds were raised. Mr. ELLIS returned to his bank, and when GRAY's clerk came in to make good the overdraft, and take up the securities, Mr. ELLIS requested him to ask Mr. GRAY to step around to the bank, which that person very soon did, and there met Mr. HARBERGER and two officers, who had been sent for. Upon being shown the bonds, GRAY appeared very much surprised, said that he had obtained them from T. B. PRATT, who was a gentleman of means residing at the St. Nicholas Hotel, and that, doubtless, he had been deceived as to the character of the bonds. He said that he had five of these bonds in all—one of them was in his safe, another was pledged as collateral with COLEMAN BENEDICT, and the remaining three were then in the hands of Mr. ELLIS. He conducted himself so coolly under the examination, and professed his ignorance in such a disingenuous manner that the bank officers were deceived. They, however, consulted counsel, who advised that, under the circumstances, if they should arrest GRAY they might be liable to respond in damages. GRAY was accordingly suffered to depart, leaving the three bonds, and surrendering the one which was in his safe at the office.

Mr. FINK knew nothing of this affair whatever, but had he been informed he would have been enabled to prevent GRAY's flight. The next morning GRAY went to his office at the usual hour, and soon after a lot of stock came in for delivery, which he had purchased the day before. He gave a check for the amount, but presently the messenger returned, stating that the bank would not certify the check. Mr. FINK then urged GRAY to go to the bank and see what the matter was. He did so, and returned apparently agitated, and said that the bank would not certify the check until after the checks had come in through the clearing-house which had been drawn the day before. GRAY asked Mr. FINK if he had seen a paragraph in the World of that morning which announced that raised bonds of the bounty loan fund were in circulation, but Mr. FINK had not, and no explanation was made. Mr. FINK then urged GRAY to draw from the Mechanics' Bank, where he had a private amount, enough to settle for this lot of stock, and not allow his credit to be injured. GRAY apparently approved of the suggestion, and left the office, soon after which Mr. FINK went out. During the absence of Mr. FINK GRAY returned, and in a few moments in a carriage containing a lady drove up. GRAY handed to the lady a package which he took from his desk, and the occupant of the carriage drove off. GRAY then went away, and was seen no more at that office. Mr. FINK returned, and finding GRAY absent, suspected something wrong, and remembered GRAY's remark about the bounty bonds. He went to the Mechanics' Bank, and found that GRAY had a short time before, negotiated a loan of $30,000 with the cashier, leaving as collateral three Bounty Fund bonds, which had been raised from $1,000 to $10,000, of precisely the same character as those which had been negotiated at the Bank of the Commonwealth. The cashier, Mr. COX, had no hesitation in taking them, as GRAY had been recommended to him by Mr. CALLENDER at the time he opened his private account. With this sum of $30,000 GRAY had purchased United States bonds of JAY COOKE & Co., and then left the street. Mr. FINK hurried around to the parties with whom GRAY was in the habit of effecting loans, and almost everywhere found traces of his swindling operations. The excitement soon became intense, and upon comparing notes it was found that GRAY had victimized parties to the extent of about $300,000 in the aggregate, leaving as security raised Bounty Fund bonds and stolen United States securities, the proceeds of a robbery in Pine-street some two years before.

Civil suit was commenced against GRAY, and the Sheriff was placed in possession of his office, but all the assets found were one hundred shares of Quartz Hill Mining Stock, worth exactly $76. The Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange at once commenced an investigation into the circumstances, and entirely exonerated Mr. FINK, believing he was put on GRAY's track, but he had escaped the country. Through the efforts of Mr. FINK, Mrs. ISABELLA HASKINS was arrested and identified as the woman who had visited GRAY's office on the morning of his flight. After a considerable time spent in examination, she was released. T. H. PRATT and others also arrested, indicted for conspiracy with GRAY, and lodged in the Tombs. After being there about a year, he was released on bail, upon agreeing to testify against GLOVER, who had then been arrested for the Boylston Bank robbery.

After GRAY's flight, the officers of the Stock Exchange determined to secure him if possible, and accordingly used every means to effect his capture whereabouts, with the intention of bringing him back and punishing him, even if not a dollar of the plunder should be recovered. One of the parties who was swindled, hearing that GRAY was in London about a year ago, went over there and got track of him, but he eluded the pursuit, came over to this country, and was here a short time, when he again returned to London, crossing the ocean at the same time that his pursuer was coming home. A few months ago the officers of the Stock Exchange learned that GRAY was in London, under the assumed name of James Payne Morgan. After corresponding with parties there, and establishing beyond his identity, they procured a requisition from the President, under the Extradition Treaty, and dispatched Capt. THOMAS SAMPSON, the skilled detective of the Stock Exchange, on the steamer Batavia, which sailed on the 18th of November. Previous to leaving, Capt. SAMPSON procured letters from Capt. JAMES IRVING, of the Detective force, introducing him to the London detectives. Thinking that possibly GRAY might obtain information of the proceedings taken, Capt. SAMPSON applied to Superintendent KELSO, requesting him to telegraph to London and have GRAY arrested to await his (SAMPSON'S) arrival. This KELSO said he could not do. His motive in refusing can only be conjectured, from the fact that while GLOVER was at large in this City he appeared to be under the especial protection of the Police, and it was only by actually kidnapping him that the Boston officers were enabled to effect his capture.

In the course of the correspondence which has led to the identification of GRAY, it has been discovered that he is engaged in getting up a company for the manufacture of some patented article. One of his letters complains that his plans have been thwarted by the refusal of some person in the company to place in his hands complete control of the business. It would appear from this that GRAY, having been so successful in this country, thought that he could meet with similar success in London. This letter was the one which proved to be his trap. On comparison, it was found that GRAY as Morgan formed his letters with the same peculiarity which marked his chirography as GRAY. This document was sent to Washington and the proof submitted, and on that exhibit the requisition was made.

It is now known that the firm of WILLIAM E. GRAY & Co. consisted of GRAY and THOMAS H. PRATT. The latter boarded in a house in Sixth-avenue during his connection with GRAY, and while he was there the landlady discovered in his room scraps of writing and chemicals, which viewed by the light of subsequent events, showed conclusively that PRATT was engaged in forging. Among the parties said to be interested in the success of GRAY's schemes were GEORGE RAPHAEL—who harbored GRAY at his house, No. 35 West Eleventh-street, for more than a week after the discovery of the plot in Wall-street—WILLIAM S. REE and CHARLES L. LARABEE. RAPHAEL was, until a few days ago, an inmate of Ludlow-street Jail, where he had been incarcerated on a civil suit. PRATT is a witness in the case of GLOVER, awaiting trial in Boston. REE is well known to the Police, and can be found at any time he is really wanted, and LARABEE is in the City somewhere.

The course of the Police in this matter is decidedly reprehensible. Had the officers complied with the request of Capt. SAMPSON and telegraphed to London requesting that GRAY be arrested and held pending the arrival of the requisition, all would have been well. As it was, some one who was interested in keeping GRAY out of the way, gave the hint to some one of GRAY's friends, who telegraphed from Boston to a party in London, and that party warned the criminal in ample time. If GRAY or any of his confederates should be arrested they would doubtless be able to give some important facts respecting the complicity of Police Detectives with first-class thieves and forgers, and unveil a state of affairs which would startle the community, many of whom believe that the Detectives are like CÆSAR's wife—above suspicion.

Retrenchment in the Parks Department.

Mr. STERBBINS, since his accession to the Presidency of the Department of Parks, has been almost constantly engaged in reforming existing abuses. The Department he found entirely different from its character when he left it—having been diverted from the purpose for which it was organized into a vast political machine, employing an army of men, at an enormous cost, mainly for the purpose of having them on hand that they might vote twice a year. Many of the vast works under way, to give employment to the 3,500 employes, were designed, he told a TIMES reporter yesterday, about thirty or forty years ahead of the requirements of the City or its citizens, and benefited no one but a certain class of speculators. Already he has reduced the force about 1,500, and quite one-half his time is now occupied in staving off the efforts of politicians and others in thrusting men upon him for employment. Even now, with the large reductions made, the force consists of about 2,200 men. When the improvement of the parks and other public works are completed which were begun by the Ring Commission, the Department will be brought back to the old grooves, and run at about one-third the expenditure of that body.

Minor Crimes and Casualties.

An unknown man, dressed in dark clothes, fell into North River, at Pier No. 33, yesterday, and was drowned. The body was recovered and sent to the Morgue.

A young woman named WINTHROP, living at No. 112 West Twenty-sixth-street, swallowed laudanum, yesterday morning, with the intention of committing suicide, but was saved by the prompt proceedings of a physician.

JAMES TRAIPER, of No. 128 West Nineteenth-street, fell down a flight of stairs at his residence, yesterday, and was seriously injured.

THOMAS WALSH and JAMES WILEY were held for trial, yesterday, by Justice HOGAN, at the Tombs Police Court, on a charge of entering the premises No. 216 Front-street, and stealing eleven boxes of cigars, worth $91 50.

SARAH LEVY, aged three years, who was run over, Friday morning, at Houston-street and the Bowery by a Fourth-avenue car, died, yesterday, in Bellevue Hospital.

The Coopers' Strike.

The strike of the journeymen coopers is now virtually ended. This consummation has been brought about by the determination of the refiners, master coopers and others who deal in tierces, to be imposed upon no longer by society men. As soon as the strike was undertaken, the shops that had been vacated were immediately filled with non-society men, and in a few days work went on as usual. The strikers attempted to intimidate these men by threats, but it had no effect, and finally finding themselves beaten, they have offered to return to work, but of course they will have some difficulty in getting employment now, as non-society men fill a great many of the warehouses.

WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

A Little Boy Pellstinto up Old-Well—Extraordinary Adventures.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HOLLAND PATENT, ONEIDA COUNTY, NEW-YORK, Friday, Feb. 2, 1872.

The imagination of the most extravagant writer of fiction could not create a more perilous situation, or a more miraculous deliverance, than the one in which a little eight-year boy of this village was placed a few evenings since, and from which he extricated himself unaided and unseen. His name is JOHN THOMAS—known for miles around as a daring but not bad boy, and called "JOHNNY"—and, in company with other boys, was playing "hide and seek" just out of the village. In a vacant lot near where they were playing a well had been sunk some years ago, and, not being in use, had become covered with a drift of snow. While running through this lot "JOHNNY" stepped in this treacherous covering, and was instantly precipitated to the bottom. The boy relates the occurrence himself, and with such apparent sincerity and straightforwardness that there can be no doubt as to the truth of his statements. He says that when he fell in he thought he was sinking into an old cellar, of which he knew, but contact with the water suggested to his mind that it must be a pond or creek. He was completely submerged in the water, which he describes as not feeling particularly cold, but soon rose to the surface. He at once reached out his hands and they struck against a jutting stone, which he grasped hold of. After supporting himself above the water until he could collect his senses, he felt around and discovered by the walls that he was in a well. It was as dark as dark could be, and he had nothing to go by but his sense of feeling. He knew that none of his companions had seen his sudden disappearance, and that consequently no aid could be expected from them. He, there, made up his mind that there was but one one way out of the well, and that was to climb up the wall! This perilous ascent he commenced without a moment's delay. The circumference of the well was too great to allow of his spreading his legs to get a footfold on either side of the wall, so he was obliged to use only a small portion of the circle to brace against. After several trials, he succeeded in getting above the water, and cautiously and slowly crawled upward—"just," he says, "as if I was climbing up a ladder, only I hadn't the 'rungs' to take hold of." When about three feet up, and already very tired, he made a misstep, and was again plunged back into the water. This, he says, almost disheartened him, but after a short breathing spell, he again began the dangerous climbing. He literally dug his finger nails into the damp wall, and clung to the merest trifles. At last he came to a place in the wall where he could not get any hold to lift him any higher. He knew that he must be some where near the top, but above him as far as he could reach, and to the right and left of him, the wall was apparently a solid piece. Despair here almost overcame him, and he says he was as if he must drop back to the bottom of the well and give up. "But I thought of mother and the rest of 'em at home, and knew that they was waiting supper for me, and my mother would lift up the curtain and look out 'n say, 'I wonder what JOHNNY stays away so long for?'" Then he made up his mind "to get out of there some way." Feeling below him, to his right, he found that the wall offered him foothold, but it would be necessary, in order to take advantage of that point, to descend a few steps over the distance he had gained, and then move about two feet to the right around the well! This most perilous part of his terrible task he accomplished in about the time it takes to relate it so far as he had. He then began the ascent again, and reached the snow safely above. The hole through which he had fallen was directly over him, and after resting a spell, with his hand grasping the top of the well, he pulled himself out, and started for home. He had gone but a few steps when he fell fainting to the ground. The unnatural excitement that had nerved him to his superhuman efforts gave way, and left him powerless. He revived soon, however, and crawled home, which was not far distant. His clothes were frozen stiff, and his hands scratched and swollen dreadfully. It took him nearly an hour to climb from the bottom of the well.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

The Collector of Taxes and the City Depositories.

Collector BADEAU has replied to the allegations made by the Committee of Fifty. He says the bodns of the Collector are $250,000, and not $100,000, as stated by the Committee; that nine-tenths of the receipts are in checks and must go through the Clearing-house before the money is really received; that the payments are made to the County Treasurer at the periods when he requires them; that the Mayor is notified every day of the daily receipts, and that the tables of balances presented by the Committee do not indicate the actual balances. In conclusion the Collector says:

"In conducting the business and doing the work of this office, the Collector was dependent in a great measure on his assistants; they may neglect some of their duties; they may make some mistakes; but I fearlessly assert that under my administration the office has been well and economically administered, and that every dollar collected has been paid over in full, and as quickly as possible. The cost of collection is less than one per cent. on the amount collected, and of $30,000,000 collected by me, this Committee themselves do not venture to insinuate that a single one has been misappropriated. Private moneyed institutions charge two per cent. for collecting and disbursing. The revenue of the city derived from the Collection Department has arisen under my charge until the office yields nearly half a million dollars. Every facility and assistance have been given the Committee of Fifty in the prosecution of their inquiry. Nothing has been withheld that could possibly assist them to make a thorough investigation; in fact, I had nothing to conceal. In conclusion, the system pursued by my predecessors has been continued in my own conduct of the office. Every Mayor, Alderman or private citizen at all interested in City affairs has had full opportunity to know the whole manner of conducting the business of the Tax Office, and full reports have been periodically published during the six years I have been Collector of Taxes of the city.

Brief Notes.

There will be free religious exercises at the Academy of Music this evening, under the direction of Rev. HENRY POWERS. Miss SARAH F. SMILEY will preach a short sermon.

Mr. EDWARD B. CADLEY, of No. 34 Lafayette-avenue, was seated in his room last evening, on the second floor, when he was startled by the report of a crash, caused by a bullet coming through the window-pane. The affair is at present a mystery.

The ball in aid of the Brooklyn Homeopathic Hospital fund will be given at the Academy of Music, on Tuesday evening. The arrangements are all complete, and it is expected that it will be a grand affair. The reserved boxes were sold last evening, and brought a fair price. The supper on the occasion will be prepared in DELMONICO's best style.

Billiards.

An interesting billiard exhibition took place at Wizeman's Stock and Gold Board Billiard room, No. 62 Broadway, yesterday afternoon. GARNIER and MAURICE DALY played a French game of 150 points, in which the former won easily, making runs of 88 and 42. Then followed a bout at the American game, 500 points up, between the same parties. This was a close contest, and was finally won by DALY. The winner made 364 in one run, and his adversary made runs of 202, 99 and 156. An exhibition of fancy shots by GARNIER closed the entertainment, which was very largely attended.

The New Postal Regulation.

The Postmaster-General has directed that the new regulations respecting newspapers sent by mail be strictly enforced. No name or memorandum is allowed to be written on a newspaper inside of the wrapper on which the address is written. It is barely permissible to mark an article with pen or pencil. More than this subjects the paper to letter postage, and the violator of the law to a fine. No printed card, handbill or advertisement, no written notice, letter, or slip of any kind must be folded in the paper. To do any of these things is to violate the law. Printed slips pasted on the outside, or folded in papers and periodicals are also violations of the law. Senders of transient papers can send bundles of printed matter by weight on transient postage charges, but must not send any written matter in such bundles.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE CITY.

The Board of Audit and Apportionment—The Accounts Presented Yesterday.

The Board of Audit and Apportionment met yesterday afternoon, President GREEN, the Controller, in the chair. Controller GREEN said that the Board had met to pass upon all claims legally and honestly presented. Commissioner VAN NORT said he believed the Board met to receive claims, and have them laid over for the specified time of five days, which the law demands, so that they may be open for general inspection. He desired to know what claims would be first recognized, within the meaning of the laws creating this Board.

Mr. GREEN said he desired to press before the Board all claims of a perfectly honest character. He believed that the claims presented by the several charitable institutions should be considered at once. He thought there was about 15,000 persons connected with these institutions who have not received their wages for several weeks, and if the City Treasury had been fully supplied with funds these people would have been paid.

After some desultory discussion of no importance, Mr. STORRS then read the following claims which had been submitted:

THE MARKET SAVINGS BANK.

Alleged Criminality of the President—The Bankruptcy Proceedings.

A large number of depositors assembled at the Market Savings Bank yesterday. About 800 signed the petition praying for a stay in the bankruptcy proceedings, making in all about 1,300 depositors who have placed their names to this document. The latest fact which has been heard in connection with the bank is of rather a startling nature, and will greatly tend to confirm the rumor of the criminality of the principal officers, so freely circulated during the last week. A victimized depositor, giving his name as JAMES H. MONTFORT, and his address as Green Vale, Long Island, is the author of the following story, which charges Mr. VAN NAME, the President of the bank, with offenses of a very serious nature. Mr. MONTFORT yesterday called upon a member of the Depositors' Investigating Committee, and stated that several days before the collapse of the Market Savings Bank, Mr. VAN NAME told a mutual acquaintance of the critical state of the bank; also that he, VAN NAME, had withdrawn his account. In addition to this, Mr. MONTFORT affirms that Mr. VAN NAME advised several persons residing in Green Vale to withdraw their deposite, and also advised the Teller of the Market Bank, of its condition, and told him to inform his friends in Green Vale so that they might withdraw their money in time. All these people, some fifteen in all, so advised, Mr. MONTFORT states, did withdraw their deposits, some four days before the collapse, others on the day previous, and two, he affirms, were quietly admitted into the bank the day of its collapse, when it was closed to the public, and received the amount of their deposits in full. These are, as may be seen, very serious charges; they implicate Mr. VAN NAME and the other officials in an act of the most infamous and flagrant dishonesty. Mr. MONTFORT produced his bank-book to show that he was really a victim of the Market Bank, and in every way gave the gentleman to whom he related these circumstances the fullest reasons for placing confidence in his statements. Another fact, which of itself may not be of much importance, but taken in connection with the rest of the circumstances, has an ominous look. Mr. MONTFORT says that his position concerning their deposits on the day of the collapse, the bank being then in the hands of a receiver, and that receiver was Mr. JAMES DENNIS. Mr. DENNIS, this gentleman says, resides in Green Vale, and is personally acquainted with all the fortunate residents of that suburban retreat who were enabled to withdraw their money before it suffered the fate of that of the unfortunate depositors.

It is to be hoped that there is some error in this statement, but taken in connection with the flight of CONKLIN and the little apparent effort made to apprehend him, it has been immediately accepted as true by those who heard of it, and will, without doubt, confirm the already unfavorable impression created by the conduct of Mr. VAN NAME. A meeting of the depositors of this bank will take place on Monday, Feb. 5, in the First District Court. The meeting is expected to be a very large one, and will receive additional interest from the fact that Mr. WORTH, the Receiver, is expected to be present and address the audience on the condition of the bank.

The case of the Market Savings Bank came up before Judge BLATCHFORD, in the United States District Court, yesterday, on petition to have the bank declared an involuntary bankrupt. The counsel for the bank said that, by arrangement with the counsel for the petitioner, SARAH MACKEY, they had agreed to an adjournment till next Saturday. Another petition was then presented by F. J. MOYSSEN, a depositor, who alleged that there was collusion between the first petitioner and the officers and trustees of the bank. A third petition was presented at the same time by F. F. STOKES, a also a depositor, who claimed that the first petition was defective as to form. Judge BLATCHFORD here stated that the second petition was defective, inasmuch as it ostensibly proceeded against the bank, while in fact it mentioned the receiver as the defendant. It appeared this was a clerical error, and the Judge gave each petitioner leave to amend his petition, the proceedings in relation to all being adjourned till next week.

The Third-Avenue Bank.

The run upon the Third-avenue Savings Bank was very light yesterday, the number of people about the building and the amount of money withdrawn being much smaller than on any day since the run commenced. Many of the depositors drew out portions of their accounts, and others withdrew their interest only. The President and officers of the bank think that their detailed statement, published in yesterday's TIMES, has had the effect of increasing confidence among the depositors. In reference to the petition in bankruptcy, filed against this bank on Friday last, the officers are confident that it will not be granted. They characterize the proceeding as entirely malicious, and done at the instigation of the party of disappointed politicians who wanted to control this bank, and, failing in which, they have used every dishonorable means to effect its ruin.

The Bowling-Green Savings Bank.

In the case of the Bowling-green Savings Bank, which came up before Judge BLATCHFORD yesterday, the counsel for the bank stated that a judgment against the bank, dissolving it as a corporation, had been obtained in the State Courts, and that consequently no service of notice could be made on any officer of the bank, there being no such corporation in existence. In view of this it was agreed to adjourn the case for a week, service being made in the meantime by publication.

SEC. 4. In any action brought by the Attorney-General under the provisions of article 2 of title 4 of chapter 8, part 3, of the Revised Statutes, chapter 151 of the Laws of 1870, or any action against a corporation or its trustees, directors or other officers, or any of them, the trustees, directors or other officers, and all agents, employes or servants of such corporation, or any of them, or other persons having charge of the books, business of such corporation, or any part thereof, or any of them, whether parties to the action or not, may be examined on oath as witnesses before the trial, and their books, papers and documents, and the plaintiffs, for the purpose of enabling the plaintiffs to prepare the complaint, or to obtain any interlocutory order or relief, or to prepare for the trial; and upon the production of such books, papers, &c., Judge thereof, of a petition by the Attorney-General, and verified by him, stating the nature of the action, and that, in his opinion, the examination of any of the persons hereinbefore mentioned is necessary for one or more of the purposes above mentioned, and specifying for which of such purposes, the Court or Judge shall make an order that such examination be had before a Judge of the Court, or before such Referee as shall be appointed by the order to take such examination. Said referee shall take the testimony of said witnesses in the county in which they reside, or are served with a summons to appear, or elsewhere, and when said depositions are taken for the purpose of obtaining any interlocutory order or relief, they may be read upon the hearing of any motion.

In case such examination is sought and ordered for the purpose of preparing for trial, a previous notice of at least five days shall be given to the defendants who have appeared of the time and place thereof; and the examination in such case shall be had subject to the same rules as are applicable to the examination of witnesses conditionally, and the depositions so taken as last prescribed shall be certified and filed in like manner as in the case of the depositions of witnesses taken conditionally under the provisions of the Revised Statutes, and the same may be read in evidence on the trial by either party, with the same effect and subject to the same objections as to the relevancy or competency of the witness, as may be taken of depositions taken conditionally as last mentioned.

SEC. 5. The Judge or the referee before whom any such examination shall be ordered shall be authorized to summon the witnesses named in the order to appear before him for that purpose, and such summons shall be served and obedience thereto shall be enforced, and the witness shall be compelled to testify in the same manner as prescribed in similar cases, by title 3 of title 3 of chapter 7, part 3 of the Revised Statutes.

SEC. 6. If in the course of the examination hereby authorized of any witness, it may become material to the plaintiffs to have the production of any books, papers or documents in the possession or under the control of the corporation against which, or against the officers of which, or some officer of which the action is brought, or of any of the directors, trustees or officers thereof, the officer before whom the examination is had shall, by order, require the same to be produced before him; and, when so produced, the witnesses summoned may be examined in respect thereto, and extracts from the same may be taken and incorporated into or appended to the depositions. The order last mentioned may be served upon the President, Secretary or Treasurer of the corporation, or any other person in the custody of the books, papers or documents required to be produced, and obedience to the same shall be enforced by proceedings as for a contempt against any of the persons upon whom the same may have been served and who had the power to comply therewith, and who shall fail to obey the same, and such failure shall be deemed a contempt of the Court in which the action is brought.

SEC. 7. In any action brought as mentioned in the first section of this act, the Court or any Judge thereof, shall have power to require the defendants, or any of them, to discover and produce any of the books, papers, or documents of the corporation against which, or against the directors, trustees, or other officers of which the action is brought, and which may be in the possession, or under the control of such defendants, containing any evidence relating to the merits of the action; and upon the presentation of a petition for that purpose by the Attorney-General, verified by him, stating the nature of the action, and describing the books, papers or documents whereof discovery is sought, and stating that the same are in the possession or under the control of the plaintiffs and that the discovery and inspection of the same is necessary to enable the plaintiffs to prepare the complaint, or to obtain any interlocutory order or relief, or to prepare for trial, the Court or any Judge thereof shall make an order in the alternative requiring the books, papers or documents so described to be deposited with the clerk of the county in which the trial is to be had, or some other suitable person to be named, to be subject to the inspection of the plaintiffs and their counsel and agents for a reasonable time, to be designated in the order, and with leave to the plaintiffs to make extracts therefrom, or that the party against whom the discovery is sought, show cause, upon a day to be named, which day shall be prior to the day on which the deposit is ordered to be made, why such a deposit should not be made.

Every such order may be vacated by the Court or Judge granting the same;

1. Upon satisfactory evidence that it ought not to have been granted.

2. Upon the production and deposit sought being made.

3. Upon proof satisfactory to the said Judge or the Court, that the books, papers or documents ordered to be produced are not in the possession or under the control of the defendants or of any of them.

SEC. 8. Such order shall have the like effect in staying proceedings and extending time, and may be enforced by the same penalties, and in like manner as now provided by law, and the practice of the Court in respect of orders for the discovery of books, papers and documents under the provisions of
